Senator Long will be buried "in a tuxedo suit," such as he rarely wore, in a sunken garden on the highest knoll in the park surrounding the skyscraper State Capitol, that he built, as his monument. Nothing is seen from the grave, high or low.

It is remembered now that, when Senator Long told other senators that men were planning to murder him, "the senators laughed."

Senator Long's widow will not follow the custom established and ask appointment to fill her husband's place in the Senate. She would not accept the position if appointed. She thinks he would like her to stay home and look after her children.

One of Senator Long's secretaries thinks he can prove that Weiss, the murderer, was one of a group of murder conspirators. In another direction, it is suggested that a monument be built in honor of Weiss. Opinions in America differ, but there will be no such monument.

In the League of Nations Great Britain took a forceful stand in the Italian-Ethiopian crisis yesterday, demanding that League members fulfill "obligations to resist, as a unit, unprovoking aggression."

If all League members would resist "as a unit," that would solve the problem for Britain and France. They would not find themselves in the unpleasant position of fighting Italy alone. Mussolini could hardly hope to overcome all members of the League, although he might try.

Mary Slate, pretty, only 19, determined to picket for her "white collar" fellow strikers in New York, had herself chained and padlocked to a post, wrists fastened behind her. Police could not move her and she made a fine speech while girls rubbed her wrists, squeezed too tight by the chain. By and by police with a "hack-saw" freed her, sent her home in triumph.

Her idea was borrowed from Mrs. Pankhurst, who chained herself to iron railings near the House of Commons in her successful fight for woman suffrage long ago. The marvelous determination of women, far exceeding that of men, is always a delight.

Miss Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard College, found England "economically cheerful," with her unemployed below two million, as against our twelve million.

Now do you suppose England reduced her unemployed to two millions? Some attribute it to the five thousand million dollars gold borrowed from us, not repaid, but that money went to building battleships, airplanes and other useful things and also, to give the Sassenach his due, to make up for bad debts of England's allies in the big war.

Two commonplace news items in today's paper:

The number of ships bringing bootleg whiskey from England is increasing.

Another man, body riddled with bullets in Greater New York, was slumped on the rear seat of an automobile. Police said "somebody on the front seat must have turned on him suddenly."

One bullet went close to a telegram signed "Margie." "Gang revenge," the police say, and that's enough.

Mrs. Florence P. Hill, mother of a boy nine years old, wrote a short note to him as he lay sleeping: "Try to be a fine man . . . follow your Bible . . . love and blessings." She made many X's on the letter, each meaning a kiss, signed "Mother," and jumped out of the window. The son will possess a large fortune, but his mother will not share it. She died.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York is arresting citizens for making a noise at night under the interesting theory that people are entitled to sleep during darkness. He will even forbid loudspeakers on "political trucks" if they make too much noise at late hours, also "yells and shouts accompanying crap games."

Why do "crap-shooters" yell and shout while "upper class" gambling places, the voice of destiny, at rouge et noir, is languid, low, barely heard above the clicking of the ivory ball.

EVELYN HOEY SHOT DEAD, H. H. ROGERS, JR., SEIZED

U. S. PROBE OF LONG DEATH DEMANDED

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., Sept. 12—Leaders of the thousands who loved Huey Long proceeded today to bury the slain senator and then determine whether he had been assassinated as the result of a conspiracy.

The Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, chosen to deliver the funeral oration, first called for a congressional investigation.

He said last night that he believed disclosure of the facts behind the killing would "shake the nation."

Long's secretary, Earl Christenberry, expressed conviction that the Senator's assassin, Dr. Carl Austin Weiss, had been chosen by lot.

"I believe they drew straws and Weiss lost," he said.

The district attorney promised a thorough investigation.

Every state offices in Louisiana was closed as the hour for the funeral approached, but all was far from quiet on Louisiana's political front.

BATTLE FOR EMPIRE

While two gravediggers spaded into the moist soil of a sunken garden adjoining the skyscraper Capitol that Long built, while thousands filed past his bier in the rotunda of that Capitol and more thousands swarmed into Baton Rouge for the funeral, friends and

Wing Quits as Board Chairman

Daniel G. Wing resigned today from the chairmanship of the board of directors of the First National Bank of Boston.

Ill-health was the reason.

His resignation was accepted and Bernard W. Trafford was elected to fill the vacancy. Trafford was president in 1928 and 1929 and has since been vice-chairman of the board.

Wing was director of First National affairs for 32 years, as president from 1903 to 1928, then as board chairman.

Accepting his resignation, the board voted a resolution ascribing to his leadership the bank's position as one of the leading financial institutions of this country.

Boston Schools Practice Oct. 1

Boston's high school football athletes will not be allowed to participate in football practice sessions for the current season before school opens on October 1st.

Patrick Campbell, superintendent of schools for the City of Boston, made the following statement to the American today:

"I agree with Dr. Charles E. Mackey that it would be unwise to allow the boys to participate in football practice before the opening day of school on October 1st."

This is in accord with the traditional system of holding the opening day of practice on the first day of class.

Lynch Wins Fifth Round Golf Match

Lynch marched to a 4 to 3 victory over Oliver Trannue, former Yale student from Cleveland. Trannue yesterday eliminated Rodney Brown, who also represented Boston in the tourney.

FOUND LOVE HERE

One of 2 Lost Sailors Set to Wed

The King's "Navoa" was all at sea today—at least that part of it in these waters.

Two members of the crew and a possible bride were being hunted by police.

Police have slight, if any, interest in the possible bride, but they are concerned with returning to the British cruiser York an able seaman and his stoker friend who have got themselves all mixed-placed somehow.

H. M. S. York sailed from Boston today without the missing sailors, one of whom filed marriage intentions yesterday at City Hall to wed a Florida girl and then, with her, obtained a waiver of the five-day law from Judge Michael Murray in municipal court.

From then on, all trace of the eager bridegroom-to-be and his stoker friend from the York vanishes.

The sailors reported missing are Henry Warr, 28, able seaman, and William Beech, 23, the stoker.

Yesterday, according to City Hall records, Warr and Miss Catherine Geyer, 21, of Florida, filed marriage intentions.

Judge Murray said that when the couple appeared before him in his lobby they were accompanied by a woman who said she was Miss Geyer's mother. He granted the waiver and the trio departed.

Whether the couple were married, police could not say, but a radio broadcast was sent out for cruising police to pick up any British sailor soon.

H. M. S. York sailed today at 11:20 for Newport, for a week's stay.

Very much pleased with his Boston visit was Vice-Admiral Sir Matthew R. Best, who apparently knew nothing about his two wandering charges.

Rome, Sept. 12—Well-informed sources said today that Italy will go ahead with her Ethiopian campaign no matter what attitude France may adopt.

Although much anxiety was expressed, on the eve of the projected speech by Premier Laval of France in the League of Nations, these sources said Italy was determined not to swerve from a war regarded as inevitable.

It was stated that Italy would not swerve even though France returned to the basis of co-operation with Great Britain outlined last February 3 at London.

British and French at that time met to promote peace by closer European co-operation and removal of tendencies calculated to lead to a race in armaments and dangers of war.

Britain Rushes 3000 More Troops to Malta

London, Sept. 12—Great Britain is rushing additional troops to reinforce its garrison at Malta, in the Mediterranean, a high source disclosed today.

Three battalions stationed at Catterick, England, are being sent. A British battalion normally is four companies of 250 men each.

Troops understood to number more than 1200 arrived at Malta yesterday from England.

If the three battalions ordered to sail today go in full strength the island will be garrisoned by more than the so-called "authorized establishment."

A boom defense — steel cables suspended across floats similar to those used extensively in British ports during the World War—has been ordered swung across the mouth of the Malta harbor Valetta.

Reports from the island said a start has been made on stringing barbed wire entanglements, and anti-aircraft guns have been assembled.

PROXY GROOM ENTERS PLEA OF GUILTY

Taunton, Sept. 12—Herbert Mansfield, Jr., 21, bridegroom in the amazing proxy marriage which has puzzled officials of two states, pleaded guilty today in district court to two charges.

He begged Judge Frederick T. Austin not to hold responsible in any way the girl he says he loves, Vesta Jean Isherwood, 15, of Nantucket.

Because Vesta was unable to elope with him, Mansfield hired Gloria Mary Rego, 18, of Providence as a substitute and she married him in Seekonk last June under Vesta's name.

Mansfield calmly pleaded guilty today to charges of conspiracy to violate the Massachusetts marriage laws and perjury.

He was held in $1,000 bail for the November grand jury.

Unable to put up the bail bond, he was taken to jail in New Bedford.

Gloria Mary Rego was taken before Judge Austin in a juvenile session and was released in custody

3 Feared Killed In Boat Blast

Tiverton, R. I., Sept. 12—Three persons are feared to have lost their lives in an explosion that destroyed a motor yacht a short distance off shore here today.

The yacht, afire, was blown to fragments as rescuers sped to its position.

State police said they believed the boat was a 44-foot power cruiser owned by Walter Arnold, proprietor of a cafe in Cranston. Arnold was not aboard.

His cruiser left the Rhode Island Yacht Club at Pawtuxet last night, bound for a marine repair shop in Tiverton. It was skippered by Benjamin Cavacca, 37, a ship-yard worker.

This craft, overdue, is unreported.

Police said their investigation led them to believe that Cavacca invited two other persons, one a boy, aboard the yacht for the short cruise.

The flaming boat was sighted off Common Fence Point just before daybreak by Georga Dixon and his son, George, Jr. Police and the Dixons were headed for the burning boat in a launch when the explosion occurred.

SINGER FOUND WITH 3 GUNS AT HER FEET

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press)

Downingtown, Pa., Sept. 12 — The honey-haired, blue-eyed little Evelyn Hoey, singer of torch songs to Broadway, Paris and London, was found shot to death early today on the floor of a bedroom of the country place of Henry Huddleston Rogers, Jr.

At her feet lay a pistol. On the bed was another. And in a corner of the room, leaning against the wall, was a sawed-off shot gun.

Rogers, 29-year-old son and namesake of the late Standard Oil multi-millionaire who died last July, was taken to jail here for questioning and was held on a technical charge of suspicion of murder.

With him, and held as a material witness, was William J. Kelly of Union City, N. J.

Both Rogers and Kelly said the girl was killed herself after a violent quarrel with Rogers. She had been a house guest for about a week.

STORIES CONFLICT

Lending weight to the suicide theory was the statement of Clyde Battin, a farmer employed by Rogers, who lives in the house.

He said that Rogers and Kelly never left the couch in the living room until after they heard the shot upstairs.

On the other hand the authorities considered the following remark of the chauffeur, Frank Catano, made in answer to a question:

"I don't see how she could have shot herself, but I can't express any opinion, because I don't know."

Both Catano and Battin said Miss Hoey was right-handed—an important consideration of how the girl met death.

Following the questioning of Battin and the others, Deputy Coroner Harvey Cox said Rogers and Kelly would be released under $1000 bail pending the coroner's inquest, set for Thursday night at 7:30 p. m.

District Attorney William H. Parke, of Chester County, said the fatal shooting of Miss Hoey, "looks like a suicide."

Asked why he was willing to re-

SHOT KILLS EVELYN HOEY, H. H. ROGERS' HEIR HELD

TORCH SINGER FOUND DEAD AFTER DRINKING PARTY ROW

lease Rogers in $1000 bail, although he is held on a charge of suspicion of murder, the district-attorney said:

"It looks so very much like suicide we feel justified in accepting bail."

FARMER'S STORY FACTOR

Parke said authorities have requestioned Claude Battin, neighboring farmer who was in Rogers' home at the time of the shooting, and the Battin repeated his original story, in which he asserted Rogers and others in the house were downstairs when Miss Hoey was shot in a second floor bedroom.

"We have not been able to break down the story told by Battin," Parke said.

The story of what happened at the farm house, located at Lyndell, a tiny community on Brandywine Creek about 25 miles west of Philadelphia, was pieced together today by officers after they had questioned Rogers, Kelly and servants at the place.

DRINKING PARTY

There had been a drinking party at the farm, they were told, last night. Unfinished glasses of liquor, bottles of soda, ginger ale and liquor, and bowls of melting ice were still standing about when officers reached the place about midnight.

Miss Hoey, who popularized the song, "What Is This Thing Called Love?" in New York night clubs and who more recently introduced "April in Paris," threatened to leave the place.

Rogers, angered and under the influence of drinking which had been going on, ordered his chauffeur, Frank Catano, to get the car and drive her away.

The actress, who has appeared in principal roles with Leon Errol and was featured with Betty Compton (now the wife of the former New York mayor, James Walker) in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," rushed upstairs to her bedroom intending, the two men thought, to pack.

Rogers and Kelly, drinking and talking, heard a shot. When they reached the room they found her lying on the floor.

SCENE AT FARMHOUSE

The scene at the farmhouse was described this morning by Chief of Police Chester F. Gilson, who was the first officer to reach the place after being called by the Rogers chauffeur. He said:

"I was called on the telephone by the chauffeur about 11 o'clock (eastern daylight time) last night. The chauffeur, who called me, said he was at a farm house half way between the Rogers' farm and Coatesville.

"He said a girl had committed suicide. He was afraid a man was going to do the same thing.

"I immediately got in touch with Deputy Coroner Harvey Cox, who started directly for the farm.

"In the meantime Dr. Thomas Richmond called me and said the chauffeur had been at his house and wanted me to go over.

"Dr. Richmond said his wife was afraid to let him go because of Rogers' reputation and known penchant for firearms. He left immediately for the farm."

ROGERS ON LAWN

"When I arrived two men were steadying Rogers, holding him up on the front lawn outside the house.

"The only people in the house at the time of the shooting were the dead girl, George Yamada, the Japanese cook, Clyde Battin, a farmer who was employed by Rogers and who had called to collect some money, and William J. Kelly, a photographer who lives in Union City, New Jersey.

"Rogers and the girl went to New York the day before yesterday and picked Kelly up.

"They returned to the farm yesterday. All of them said they were downstairs when they heard the shot.

"When I got in the room I found the girl lying partly on her back and partly on her side.

ROOM IN DISARRAY

"She was wearing a green suit, light stockings, a lace waist, and black shoes.

"None of her belongings was in the room where she was found. It was a bedroom with a single bed and the room was in disarray.

"Her pocketbook was found in another room. It appeared as if she might have stumbled against the furniture.

"In other words, it looked like any room after a drunken party.

"When I got there Rogers was standing outside wearing a light top coat over shabby clothes. He had on no hat. He couldn't talk intelligently."

The farmer, Claude Battin, 51 years old, told the following story of the scene at the farm house:

"I arrived at the house about 6 o'clock last night. Rogers and Miss Hoey were there, and we spent about an hour talking about some dogs that had been killed at the direction of Bob Wright, the foreman of his farm.

"Then he and Miss Hoey began to argue. He wanted to call a lawyer, a man named Clark, and wanted him to come right over and take a statement from me.

"Miss Hoey didn't want him to do so. They had some words.

"I went into the kitchen and when to the bathroom, and I heard Mr. Rogers and Miss Hoey talking.

"Miss Hoey said she was going back to New York, or was going to call New York, or something.

"Rogers did not want her to call or go, so he went to the wall and pulled the telephone wire away.

"Then I went back to the kitchen. I stood for a moment in the doorway of the pantry looking into the living room through a window.

"I could see Mr. Rogers, his friend (Kelly) and Miss Hoey sitting on the couch. Mr. Rogers was waving his arms in the air but I could not hear what he said.

"Then Miss Hoey got up and went out of the room.

BANGO—GOES SHOT

"Mr. Rogers and Mr. Kelly kept talking, and suddenly—bango:—I hear a shot.

"Mr. Rogers jumped off the sofa and ran out of the room. He came back a minute later like a wild man, and Mr. Kelly went out with him.

"And then I went in and followed them upstairs and learned the lady was shot."

Battin fixed the time of the shooting at about 9:40 p. m. Eastern Daylight Time. Questioned again about the whereabouts of Rogers and Kelly when the shot was heard, he said:

"There is absolutely no question about it. They were on the sofa."

So far as Battin observed, Rogers took "only two drinks."

MODERNIZED HOME

Located on a 65-acre estate known as "Indian Run," the house is two-and-a-half stories high, of stone construction and thoroughly modernized.

Rogers has owned it for five or six years. The home is not particularly pretentious.

"Drink, Yell," Says Rogers' House Cook

By Associated Press

Downington, Pa., Sept. 12—George Yamada, the Japanese cook, related in broken English his version of what he knew of the shooting of Evelyn Hoey at the farm of Henry H. Rogers, Jr.

"I only work in this house one week. I see right away it is no kind of a house. It is drink, drink, drink all the time. It is untidy. I say I going to quit. The lady she say she give me more money.

"The lady is my boss. I tell her I don't want more money. Last night I know nothing. I not hear no shot. I'm in the kitchen cooking.

"Then I hear people yell, yell, yell. I run in and that's all I know, only they say lady is shot. I see her lying there."

Baker, Beck, Davis To Fight U. S. Acts

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 12—The board of trustees of the Edison Electric Institue has retained John W. Davis to aid in contesting the constitutionality of the public utilities act of 1935, it was announced today.

The institute has also retained Newton D. Baker to participate in a case which will contest the validity of gifts and loans of federal money to enable municipalities to compete with private companies.

It has retained the services of Forney Johnston and James M. Beck to argue before the Supreme Court in the case now pending on the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Hitler Orders Reichstag Session

Berlin, Sept. 12—Reichsfuehrer Hitler today called the Reichstag (Parliament) to meet Sunday in Nuernberg, where he is at present, "to hear a declaration from the Government."

Nazi headquarters at Nurnberg declined to indicate what Hitler's declaration would be. The call to the Reichstag session was issued suddenly from Berlin this morning. Foreign office sources said that the foreign policy and economic matters would be the principal subjects of Der Fuehrer's speech.

Stage Beauty Dead in Shooting, Playboy-Host and Latter's Wife

MRS. VIRGINIA L. ROGERS

HENRY H. ROGERS, JR.

This picture, taken two years after their marriage in 1929, shows Henry H. Rogers, Jr., mystery shooting suspect, and his wife, the former Virginia Lincoln, Jr. Rogers is under arrest as a sequel to the death of Evelyn Hoey, stage beauty, on his farm near Downingtown, Pa.

This is the Evelyn Hoey who, as dancer and torch singer, was the toast of Boston, London and Paris. The picture was taken as the ill-fated actress appeared in her latest hit, "Fifty Million Frenchmen." Her death of bullet wounds came as tragic climax to a hectic houseparty at the Pennsylvania country home of H. H. Rogers, Jr., heir to a $500,000 "pittance" of the vast oil fortune established by his grandfather.

ROGERS CALLED 'VERY JEALOUS'

By International News Service

St. Louis, Sept. 12—H. J. Hoey, of St. Louis, father of Evelyn Hoey, pretty musical comedy and radio star who was found shot to death today in the Pennsylvania farm home of H. H. Rogers, Jr., intends to depart at once for the east, he told International News Service.

Hoey, who is in the drug business here, said that he was awaiting official notification of his daughter's death from Pennsylvania authorities before leaving. He said that the first word of her death was given him in a long distance call from the New York Evening Journal.

Hoey, who talked in a voice which shook with grief, said that Rogers was "very jealous."

His voice quivering as he spoke of his daughter, Hoey said:

"She chose the stage as her life's career. She made her first appearance when she was 10 years old. Her only training had been in dancing, but she had natural talent that gained her success."

Hoey then told of receiving letters from the blonde beauty in which she declared that Rogers was "a very nice young man, but very temperamental."

"That was the reason we (Hoey and his wife) objected to their acquaintance," the father said. "Rogers was very jealous of her. Otherwise he was a nice young man. I had never met him, but my wife has."

Miss Hoey's Mother Sobs At Word of Tragedy

New York, Sept. 12—Mrs. Henry J. Hoey, mother of Evelyn Hoey, collapsed today when informed her showgirl daughter was dead at the Downingtown, Pa., home of Henry H. Rogers, Jr.

Mrs. Hoey was found at the apartment of her famous daughter, whom she had been visiting in recent weeks.

"My daughter commit suicide? "Nothing in the world will ever convince me she did."

Downcast words burst today from the tremulous lips of the grief-wracked mother.

The mother made her declaration after an hour of continuous sobs which started when Rogers' lawyers told her that her daughter had ended her own life.

"She couldn't . . . She wouldn't . . . She had everything in the world to live for," the mother cried.

Architect Dies

Glens Falls, N. Y., Sept. 12 — Charles S. Peabody, 55, of New York City, nationally known architect, died at his summer home on Lake George after a heart attack.

POOR GIRL---RICH MAN

Divergent Life Paths Cross in Hoey Tragedy

Evelyn Hoey was a talented, ambitious beauty, born in poverty, reaching for fame and fortune—as delicately fragile, and as expensive, as the green orchids she invariably wore.

Henry Huddleston Rogers, Jr., was a recalcitrant scion of wealth, almost a misanthrope, who scorned society and fame and riches.

No imagination could envisage a crossing point in the sig-zag lines of their divergent careers.

She always wore a corsage of those expensive blooms when she appeared in New York night life.

She was a stage and radio star, singer and dancer, discovered in Boston, hailed here as the sure successor to the twinkling pumps of Marilyn Miller.

Family Blacksheep

Rogers was the wayward blacksheep of a family that has made front page news and fresh crisp dollars since his grandfather of the same name joined John D. Rockefeller in an enterprise that came to be known as Standard Oil.

His sister is the famous Millicent Rogers, the former Countess Ludwig Salm von Hoogstraeten, who later became Mrs. Arturo Ramos, merging her millions with those of the Argentine globe-trotter.

Rogers is 29.

She was a husky voiced warbler of torch songs before she became a prima donna of musical comedy.

He received an Oxford education, turned his broad back on society, incurred his father's ill-will, took a faddish interest in mechanics and motion pictures, indifferent to the overture of his cha grined relatives.

The late Colonel Henry Huddleston Rogers, who inherited control of Standard Oil, specifically "cut him off" with an inheritance of the income from a $200,000 trust fund.

The colonel's widow, daughter Millicent, the latter's young son, Peter Salm, favorite of the grandfather, inherited th- residue of the estate, variously estimated at from $45,000,000 to $100,000,000, although reports last year were that the smaller figure was an exaggeration.

Evelyn Hoey was a Boston discovery.

Born in Minneapolis, she aspired to the stage in her early teens and, chaperoned by her zealous mother, toured the mid-western "sticks" in kiddie shows.

He took her out of a small town road show and displayed her to an approving public on the stage of the Metropolitan Theater during the summer of 1927.

She crooned blues songs and danced, and stopped the show.

The Met held her as long as it could, which was 12 weeks. She signed at the age of 17 for an ingenue part in the Greenwich Village Follies and remained with that production for nine months in 1928.

When she returned to Boston it was as the featured singer in "Yours Truly," with Leon Errol. Boston welcomed her return at the Majestic and the reviewers hailed her as the living example of the reason why gentlemen prefer blondes.

Her blonde hair was an inheritance from her mother. Her only brother was also fair-haired.

When she sang "What Is This Thing Called Love" in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," all Yale moved fro mNew Haven to New York.

As the baby, tied to the apron strings of her American mother in the big, bad city of Paris, she starred in that show in Boston at the Colonial.

E. Ray Goetz, the producer, had snatched her out of Good News during a successful London run, to star her in "Fifty Million Frenchmen."

Earlier Tragedy

Cole Porter, noted composer, heard her sing in Paris and was instrumental in bringing about her ultimate contract with Goets and her return to the American stage.

His tragic death, an unsolved mystery of portent, in view of the tragedy today, did not stop her dancing nor still her voice.

Some of the songs she popularized were "April in Paris," "Unlucky in Gambling," "Find Me a Primitive Man," and "The Boy Friend Back Home."

Her last Broadway role was with Clark and McCullough in the musical comedy, "Walk a Little Faster."

In 1931, after further establishing her success in a series of radio engagements, during which she appeared on the program of a chewing gum sponsor, she visited Boston again for Glorious Fiesta Week at the Bradford Hotel.

Court Litigant

More recently she had been in the news as the litigant in court actions, one arising from her radio contracts, another from claimed damage to her blonde tresses.

She collected $250 from a radio concern that signed her for 10 songs and never put her on the air.

She sued a New York hairdresser, for $25,000, claiming she suffered burns to hair, head and shoulders while receiving a "permanent."

Nowhere along the milestones of her brief and ambitious career was there any signified intersection of her life line with that of Henry Huddleston Rogers, Jr.

Rogers was the son of Colonel Rogers an dMary Benjamin, first of his three wives.

In 1929, young Rogers married Virginia Lincoln, daughter of a Cleveland physician. He met her while he was working in a Cleveland electrical plant as a mechanic for 25 cents a week.

His Legacy Cut

By staying married to her he established some kind of Rogers family record.

He and his wife were in the news in 1933, when a chauffeur, John Spinks, accused Rogers of kicking him in the head while he was examining the headlights of a car.

Rogers said Spinks had forced him and his wife out of the car on a lonely road near Wayne, Pa.

Rogers' interest switched from mechanics to motion pictures, and in partnership with Harold Mc-Cracken, Arctic explorer, he ventured to film a nudist picture. The venture flopped.

He obtained a $1-a-year job as a news reel camera man, and was thrown out of Madison Square Garden because he had no union card. A South Seas voyage to make pictures also failed.

During this time, Millicent and her father were battling a divorce suit in the Paris courts brought by Count Salm. A separation action in this country was abandoned when attorneys began to introduce love letters into evidence.

A rift in the older Rogers' household began in 1928. The first Mrs. Rogers obtained a divorce in Holland. Three years later the second wife ended the marriage at Reno. In 1933 the father married his third wife, the present widow.

When Colonel Rogers, the father, died last July, he left only the income from a $500,000 trust fund for his son, with the note:

"I have made what I consider adequate provision for my son."

ROGERS' WIFE IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, Sept. 12—Attorney Thomas H. Jones, a business acquaintance of Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Rogers, Jr., said today Mrs. Rogers is in Cleveland and has been here with relatives for two or three months.

Jones asserted, however, there had been no estrangement between the couple.

The attorney told of Mrs. Rogers' whereabouts when he was advised that her husband had been detained by Pennsylvania police investigating the mysterious death of Evelyn Hoey, Broadway torch singer, at the Rogers' farm estate near Downington, Pa.

"Then I was sent for the doctor."

Asked whether he thought Miss Hoey shot herself or whether somebody killed her, Catano said:

"I can't express my opinion because I don't know, but I don't see how she could shoot herself."

Greek Vote Oct. 27 On Monarchy

London, Sept. 12—The Athens correspondent of Reuters reported today a nation-wide plebiscite to determine whether the people of Greece, now a republic, wish to restore the monarchy has been fixed for October 27.

The same correspondent said there were reports that President Zaimis has decided to withdraw his resignation in hope of an honest plebiscite.

HOEY TRAGEDY DESCRIBED BY CHAUFFEUR

Downingtown, Pa., Sept. 12—Frank Catano, chauffeur for Henry H. Rogers, Jr., gave a graphic account today of the alleged arguments preceding the shooting of Evelyn Hoey in Rogers' farm home last night.

"There is no question in my mind but that the trouble was due to the dogs.

"Mr. Rogers and Miss Hoey and I came over to the farm together, by train, last Thursday or Friday.

"Mr. Rogers had been a patient in a New York hospital for throat trouble. He planned to rest up at the farm. No sooner had we arrived there than he became very much excited over the condition of the place.

"He said to me 'Damn it all, look at this place! The dogs are ruined, the cattle haven't been fed, the bills are unpaid, and it's all gone to hell.'

"Miss Hoey kept telling him to take it easy and be quiet and rest, but he wouldn't hear of it.

"This situation went on all week. Mr. Kelley came to visit a couple of days ago, and yesterday Mr. Rogers and he and Miss Hoey II planned to go back to New York together.

"Last evening Battin came in, and after hearing his story about the dogs Mr. Rogers wanted to get his lawyer right away. Miss Hoey did not want him to. She kept saying: 'Go to bed and rest. You've got to get sleep. You can do it just as well tomorrow, and there's no use staying up late tonight.'

QUARREL RENEWED

"Mr. Rogers was stubborn, however, and this started them quarreling all over again. I was going around the house on my various duties, and about 8 o'clock, or maybe it was 8:30, I talked to Miss Hoey.

"She said she wanted to borrow $5 to get to New York with, and promised her mother would send me the money.

"I told her I did not want to go against Mr. Rogers' wishes, as he was my boss, and later he said to her:

"'What the hell do you mean trying to borrow money from my chauffeur?'

"He told her he would have given her the money if she needed it. Then Miss Hoey went up Mr. Rogers' bedroom, where there was an extension telephone, and tried to get in touch with her mother.

ROW OVER TELEPHONE

"Mr. Rogers heard her over the living room telephone and said:

"'Who in hell gave you the authority to use my phone?'

"Later on, about 30 minutes before the shooting, I saw Miss Hoey, and asked her why Battin came running out and said:

"'Come in quick.'

"I went in. Mr. Rogers, Kelly, the cook and Battin were all in the kitchen. Somebody, I don't know who it was, said:

"'She shot herself.'

"I went up to Mr. Rogers' bedroom. Miss Hoey was dead on the floor. She was lying on her back near the door, her feet facing the door. Her eyes were open, her hands were extended at her side, and her legs were crossed.

"The pistol, with which I suppose the shooting was done, was near the left hand, the bullet indicating a distance of about 15 feet from the body. The bullet hole was on the left side of the forehead, over the left eye, near the hairline.

Proxy Bridegroom's Plea

Pays For Favor

GUILTY; TRIES TO CLEAR GIRL HE LOVES

tody of her father for a hearing next Tuesday.

The court did not require any bail bond, but set $50 as the amount to be collected if she fails to appear.

Vesta Isherwood sat with her mother in the courtroom and listened to the brief proceedings in the case of the Providence youth for whom her love cooled after the proxy marriage.

She heard Mansfield appeal for her, saying:

"The girl (Vesta) withdrew from the compact. She should not be held responsible. Please don't hold her responsible in any way."

No charge has been made against Vesta.

Judge Austin asked Mansfield, who did not have a lawyer, if he had any argument to make against being held for grand jury action.

"No," said the youth.

Take His Medicine

He did not appear surprised when he learned that he would have to wait in jail nearly two months, unless somebody comes forward with a bond of $1000 for his release.

If the jury indicts him, there will be a further wait before he is tried in Superior Court.

"I am ready to take my medicine," he had said last night when the strange affair came to a solution.

The finding of Gloria Mary Rego solved the case.

She said Mansfield hired her for $5—still unpaid—to impersonate Vesta Isherwood.

"I thought I would be helping two broken-hearted sweethearts," she said.

Miss Rego memorized Vesta's name and address and other details and recited these to the Seekonk town clerk, who issued the license and married the pair.

Then Vesta's love for the young restaurant counterman cooled in spite of the romantic and hazardous scheme he had evolved to make her his bride by proxy.

G-Man Pose

Mansfield tried to insist on taking Vesta away as his wife and told her mother she had married him. Vesta denied it.

After long periods of questioning, Mansfield announced he had married a substitute under her name.

The object of his affections had agreed to the scheme, he said. Vesta retorted that even if she had agreed she had changed her mind about him.

She said she began to dislike him after he tried to pose to her as a "G-man" on special assignment from Washington.

Officials then demanded that Mansfield tell the name of his substituted bride. He said he did not know it.

Finally he gave the name of a young man who took the officials to a girl who led them to Gloria Mary Rego.

"Are you looking for me?" asked Miss Rego at her home on Transit street in the Federal Hill district of Providence.

"Yes. I married Herbert Mansfield. I didn't see any wrong in it. I wanted to help."

Mansfield, brought here from Providence after the solution, spent the night in a cell in police headquarters.

Miss Rego came here with her father for further questioning last night, and at a late hour she said she was too tired to go home. She slept in the matron's quarters in the station.

The youth and girl were taken to court separately this morning. Neither was given a chance to talk with Vesta Isherwood, and the latter made no effort to talk with them.

Still a Puzzle

Vesta was not permitted to attend the session at which Gloria Mary Rego was taken before Judge Austin.

The public was barred, as is customary in juvenile court cases. No formal charge was made.

After Mansfield was taken back to the police station, to await transfer to the New Bedford jail, Vesta and her mother left for Nantucket, where she lives, and where she and Mansfield began their romance a year ago.

Officials are still puzzling over the status of the marriage. If it is decided that Mansfield and Gloria Mary Rego are husband and wife, the girls' parents will ask the probate court to annul the marriage.

Funds Asked

Washington, Sept. 12—Secretary Wallace said the farm administration has asked the budget bureau for $2,000,000 to carry out the potato control program until Congress appropriates funds.

W. C. T. U. PENS INDICTMENT

By Associated Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 12—"Appalling social conditions" were blamed on forces which "brought liquor back" by resolutions before the 61st Annual Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union today.

"Moderate" use of liquor was called "a fallacy and a menace" in one resolution which declared total abstinence essential in the modern day of mechanized speed.

The apparent "utter futility of liquor control" was cited.

Gambling Hit

Other resolutions embodied principles of the five-year program for the Frances E. Willard Centenary celebration in 1939.

These included education in effects of alcohol, character building through opposition to gambling, lotteries, indecent moving pictures, liquor advertising, cigarette smoking among women, young men and children and child labor.

Citing existing conditions as possessing manifold temptations for youth, another resolution pledged the union to work for reform.

Another deplored easy divorces which "weaken the sanctity of the marriage bond" and disrupt family life.

Liquor Consumption Takes Big Jump

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 12—The country is drinking more legal liquor this year than it did last.

This was disclosed today at the Treasury. Its records showed 57,000,000 gallons of distilled spirits and 27,700,000 barrels of beer, ale, stout and porter flowed through Uncle Sam's tax turnstiles during the first seven months of 1935.

Compared with the same period in 1934, distilled spirits gained 12,000,000 gallons and malt liquors 2,900,000 barrels.

The amount of tax-paid distilled spirits withdrawn from warehouses for consumption during the full year ending June 30, 1935, was 82,457,338 gallons, compared with 164,291,295 in 1917 and 235,543,973 in the typical pre-prohibition year of 1912.

Consumption of beer and other malt liquors is nearer the former marks, a total of 41,946,201 barrels during the past fiscal year comparing with 60,729,509 in 1917 and 62,108,633 in 1912.

5-10 Bride to Quit Oriental Hubby

Cupid's Merger Balks

By Associated Press

Columbus, Sept. 12—A romantic courtship that resulted in the marriage of the foster son of China's president and a dime store clerk appeared to be tottering today.

A separation contract, being prepared by a Columbus attorney, seemingly climaxed a love that bloomed over a hardware counter for K. M. James Lin and the former Viola Brown and blossomed into an elopement.

Forrest Smith, counsel for Mrs. Lin, said:

"We have many things to straighten out."

One of them, he declared, concerns a financial settlement.

"There will be no divorce unless one of the two parties subsequently decides to apply for one," Smith asserted.

Lin, Ohio State University student, could not be reached.

International attention centered on the marriage after the couple eloped to Ashland, Ky., July 14. From China came word that Lin Sen, venerable president of the Chinese republic, opposed the match. He ordered his son to return home.

Lin met Miss Brown when she returned a pocketbook which he lost after making a purchase at her counter. Both are 24.

Columbus, O., Sept. 12.—Disapproval by President Lin Sen of China was advanced today as a factor in contemplation of plans for the separation of James Lin, Chinese student, and Viola Brown, his American bride.

STATE BANKERS WARNED OF INFLATION

The "new deal" has retarded recovery in the United States, Professor Neil Carothers of Lehigh University told the Savings Banks Association of Massachusetts at its annual meeting at the New Ocean House, Swampscott, today.

He said:

"Recovery measures of the government have retarded recovery in this country at least six months and probably a year.

"SPENDING THEORY"

"There has developed in our time a new theory of economics. It might be described as the spending theory.

"In fundamental philosophy is that we have reached an age of plenty and that there is no longer any problem of creating wealth, but only the problem of distributing it."

Professor Carothers predicted an inflationary price rise although he said he did not believe it would be "a headlong, all-destroying rise."

He continued:

"There is a definite danger that after the inflation elements in our government, seeing the failure of their monetary policies so far, will rush into a final inflation that will destroy all the securities, equities and fixed incomes in the country."

PLENTY FOR GREAT BOOM

He said that there were sufficient excess reserves and idle credit in the United States now to finance a boom twice as great as "that awful orgy of 1928-29."

Carl M. Spencer, president of the association, said nearly 2,000,000 depositors had placed more than two billion dollars in Massachusetts savings banks.

He asserted that under the government's social security measures, thrift might become a thing of the past and the people might find no use for savings banks except for temporary savings.

SEA SERPENT SEEN

Fisherman Tells of Monster

It is not uncommon for fishermen to see queer monsters of the sea. But when they see a sea serpent—thereby hangs this tale.

Adelbert Langthorne of Gloucester, member of the crew of the Gloucester halibut fishing schooner Imperator, today told of seeing one.

According to his story, he and other members of the crew, with Captain Albert Williams at the wheel, were fishing on Western Banks when the monster suddenly loomed out of the deep and came alongside.

At one time, he said, the monster placed 20 feet of his head out of water. When some of the crew went below to get harpoons, he disappeared.

He described him as being 70 feet long, with a head like a crocodile's and a body like an eel's. He was brownish-blue in color and had large eyes and a long snout.

Chicago, Sept. 12 — Mrs. Anna Wilmarth Ickes bequeathed her estate, estimated at $500,000 by her attorney, to her husband, Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, her will on file for probate disclosed today.

Mrs. Ickes, who was killed Aug. 30 in an automobile accident in New Mexico, drew the will in 1931 and then estimated her estate at $800,000. Frederick J. Marx, her attorney, said.

DOCTOR-SLEUTH DIES

Norris Proved Elwell Slain

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 12—Dr. Charles G. Norris, 68, chief medical examiner of the city for 18 years, whose autopsies in a number of sensational murder cases won him wide fame, is dead following a sudden illness.

One of Dr. Norris' outstanding cases was the murder of Joseph B. Elwell, bridge expert, found slain in his uptown apartment 15 years ago.

The death was listed as a suicide before Dr. Norris was called. By means of a scientific autopsy, however, Dr. Norris established that Elwell had been shot by a revolver held directly in front of his forehead, in such a position that the victim could not have pulled the trigger himself.

The Elwell murder never has been solved.

NORTHERN EUROPE BACKS BRITISH ANTI-WAR PLEA

SCANDINAVIANS, DUTCH AND BELGIANS WARN LEAGUE

By Associated Press

Geneva, Sept. 12—A group of Europe's most powerful small nations came out unequivocally in the League of Nations assembly today against the employment of force as a means of acquiring territory.

Statesmen of the Netherlands, Belgium and Sweden—the last understood to represent all the Scandinavian countries—pledged their nations loyal support to the League of Nations covenant.

They thereby backed the British policy pronounced yesterday by Sir Samuel Hoare, Great Britain's foreign secretary.

Support of the League, in the face of the threatened invasion of Ethiopia by Italy, was pledged by Jonkheer A. C. De Graeff, foreign minister of the Netherlands, by Premier Paul Van Zeeland of Belgium, and by Richard Sandler, foreign minister of Sweden.

It was reported without confirmation that the Scandinavian statesmen would recommend their governments resign from the League if it fails to make good in this Italo-Ethiopian crisis.

Premier Van Zeeland told the assembly Belgium "had decided to go the limit" in taking part in the common responsibility of League members.

Many delegates attached deep significance to this statement since Belgium is an ally of France.

Shortly after Van Zeeland's speech, Premier Laval of France authorized the issuance of a denial by the press that he had said he would never approve the application of sanctions against an aggressor in the dispute between Italy and Ethiopia.

The general view was that Great Britain had told European nations unless they join to prevent an unprovoked aggression and make the league a worthwhile instrument of peace, England will remain aloof from the continent.

British delegates seemed determined to prevent a repetition of the episode during the Sino-Japanese dispute, when the League contented itself with a moral condemnation of Japan and a decision not to recognize the independent state of Manchoukuo.

The League Council, recognizing the danger of League delay in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute, decided today to stay in session throughout the crisis.

Only when and if all threat of war was removed definitely, League sources said, could adjournment be reconsidered.

The Italian representatives, still irritated by the speech of the British foreign secretary and its implied threat of sanctions, repeated the warning attributed Premier Benito Mussolini several weeks ago to the effect that "sanctions mean war."

'No European War Now, Bad News for U.S.'

London, Sept. 12 (AP)—Lord Beaverbrook's newspaper, the Evening Standard, said editorially today:

"There will be no European war at the present time."

This statement, under the headline "London, Paris, New York," was followed with the remark, "There is bad news, too, for America is convinced that a European war is not far off."

The editorial added: "Although the export of war materials from the United States is forbidden by the Neutrality Act until March, 1936, American war stocks show a steady improvement.

"Money is a very reliable indicator of the temper of the people. Money is the real godhead of the Temple of Fear.

"When war material prices rise in America, it means the Americans fear war although not one in which they will be involved."

Too Young to Fight—But Old Enough to Flame With Italy's War Spirit

(Picture From International News Photograph Service)

Not old enough to fight or to send sons or husbands to the battle front, these Italian boys and girls are nevertheless not too young to feel the war spirit's flaming enthusiasm. Their cheers bring a smile to the stern features of Dictator Mussolini as he passes through a street of a village in Brenner Pass, near the Austrian border. In the rising generation, says Il Duce, is the hope of a "greater Italy."

FEDERAL PROBE OF LONG DEATH DEMANDED

foes of the "dictator" drew up their lines to battle for control of the state.

Governor Oscar K. Allen as titular head of the Long machine is pledged to carry on the doctrines of the dictator; his enemies have declared they will fight.

But neither camp has divulged its strategy—if it has agreed on any. A raft of reports about likely political developments among the administrationists went unconfirmed.

DEMANDS PROBE

Mr. Smith, former Shreveport clergyman and national organizer of Long's Share-Our-Wealth clubs, announced he had called on Joseph W. Byrns, speaker of the National House of Representatives, to order the Congressional inquiry.

"I wired the Speaker," said Mr. Smith, "that, since he had appointed a committee to investigate Senator Huey P. Long's activities in Louisiana, he should appoint one to investigate his assassination."

Byrns recently designated a committee with authority to inquire into Louisiana politics to determine whether a "republican form of government" was not destroyed by Long's dominance and legislation.

His action was in conformity with a House resolution, generally intended to permit inquiry into congressional elections, but so broadly worded that it provided for a Louisiana investigation.

Long's grave was dug near two great oaks in the center of a beautiful sunken garden across the drive fronting the capitol.

It was Mrs. Long's wish that he be buried there, and the senator was himself quoted as having expressed a desire to lie in the State House grounds.

FUNERAL LATE TODAY

The funeral was set for 4 p. m., Central standard time (6 p. m. E. D. T.).

Simple was the ritual arranged for one of the most striking figures in Southern politics.

A funeral march, adapted from "Every Man a King," the campaign song which Long wrote; the eulogy and sermon by Mr. Smith, and the reading of scripture; that was all.

But every foot of the 20 acres of capitol grounds was expected to be filled at the time.

The sorrowing and the curious meanwhile streamed by the hundreds past the huge bronze casket, magnificent in construction, in the capitol, dressed in evening clothes. Long lay on a couch within the coffin.

Floral wreaths were ranked higher and higher as the throng passed.

C. O. Maher of Baton Rouge, builder of an electric machine used to locate underground metal when the State House was being built, told of having located several metallic coffins. The bodies in them, dead 100 years before, were relatively well preserved.

He said Long ordered re-burial of the coffins, with the remark:

"When my time comes, I hope I'll be buried there, too."

Governor Allen and Mr. Smith were announced by circulated handbills as speakers at a state-wide memorial service for Long in Alexandria Saturday.

Trent L. James, a Long supporter and tax assessor, of Rapides parish, was named as the presiding official of the assembly.

Shortly before Mr. Smith announced his request for investigation of Long's slaying, District Attorney John Fred Odom of East Baton Rouge parish said he "would leave no stone unturned that might throw light" on the assassination of Long.

Odom announced that the thrice-postponed inquest into the death of Dr. Weiss, shot to death by Long's bodyguards, would be resumed Monday at 10 a. m.

HITLER GREETS 56,000 YOUTHS

By Associated Press

Nurnberg, Germany, Sept. 12—Reichsfuehrer Hitler today called a spade a "gun of peace and a weapon for domestic self-preservation."

The German leader's voice was clear and loud as he addressed 56,000 young men from labor camps, although he had stood at attention for three hours in the hot sun returning the salutes.

"The spade is the instrument which most honors the nation," declared Hitler.

"I wish all Germany could witness today's spectacle, then even the last doubter would be converted to national Socialism and would realize that molding this great nation into one component whole is not a dream.

"One of our main tenets ever has been to remove cleavages among German people. Nothing is more calculated to do so than labor service.

"You may be proud you are the first class serving under the new compulsory labor law.

"For centuries to come, labor service will be a cardinal feature of German life."

ESTATE SUES J. P. MORGAN

J. P. Morgan and 19 associates in the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., of New York, were named in a suit for $500,000, by the estate of the late Frederic E. Snow of Brookline, filed today in federal district court.

The suit, according to the papers on file with the federal clerk, grew out of an attempt to help the Massachusetts Bankers, a private banking partnership in Boston which was in financial difficulties in Dec., 1930.

This latter organization had appealed for help to the Morgan firm. The Morgan company, it is alleged, placed the assets of the Massachusetts Bankers at $22,475,000. This valuation, the plaintiff alleges, was made recklessly and with negligence and without any reasonable investigation.

The plaintiff, it is alleged, gave $250,000 as his contribution. He claims he relied entirely on the advice and assurance, representations and agreements made by the defendants.

7-Times-Wed Hubby Faces Rest in Jail

Two wives too many in a batch of seven brought a two-year House of Correction sentence today in Waltham court to William A. Read, 37, Canton beer parlor proprietor.

Read was found guilty on a charge of polygamy by Judge P. Sarsfield Cunniffe, after wives Nos. 6 and 7, who sat together in the courtroom and evidenced great friendliness, had testified.

He appealed, and Judge Cunniffe immediately increased his bail from $2000 to $5000.

No. 7 wife, the former Alice R. McKenney, 20, of 164 Brown street, Waltham, stated she married Read February 14. The first she knew he had been married previously, she said, was when officers came with a warrant charging him with non-support of his sixth wife.

No. 6 wife, the former Florence Mongeau of Malden, testified she married Read January 4, 1930, and they had two children. He has neglected, however, to support her, she claims. A non-support charge, brought by her, is now pending in Malden.

Judge Cunniffe was informed Read has had five other wives, but they were legally out of Read's life, either through annulment or divorce.

"This seems to be a habit with him," remarked the judge in passing sentence.

W. G. THOMPSON DEAD

Defended Sacco and Vanzetti

Attorney William G. Thompson, famed for his unsuccessful legal battle to save Sacco and Vanzetti from the electric chair for a Braintree payroll murder in 1920, died today.

The end came at his home, 545 Hammond street, Chestnut Hill, where he had been ill since last January.

He was suffering from a complication of diseases.

Born in Peacham, Vt., in 1864, Attorney Thompson received his early education in his native State and then entered Harvard College graduating in 1888.

Three years later he was graduated from Harvard Law school.

Two years after his graduation from law school he was named as an assistant United States District Attorney, in Boston. He held this office until 1895, resigning to enter private practice.

He married Mary Hinkley Huntington, of New York, in September, 1896. Five children, three girls and two boys, were born to the couple.

In 1912 he was appointed a lecturer at Harvard Law School and had since been associated with the school.

Attorney Thompson entered the fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti, slayers of two payroll guards, during the height of daily demonstrations by radicals protesting their conviction and death sentences.

He found several legal loop holes that enabled him to bring their cases in and out of federal and state courts until seven years after their original conviction and sentence.

Finally, in 1917, Thompson lost his legal battle and Sacco and Vanzetti were executed in State prison, Charlestown.

HUEY LONG DIED A "POOR MAN"

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

Washington, Sept. 12—Senator Huey P. Long died a comparatively poor man, one of his closest personal friends revealed here today.

Another intimate friend in Baton Rouge said:

"I don't believe the senator left more than $100,000."

The assassinated senator was said to have earned in excess of that amount this year, but spent more than that in maintaining his national "share our wealth" organization.

His income in 1934 was only $25,000, he told the Senate last spring, and he was said to have gone heavily into debt last year launching his national wealth movement.

This friend revealed Long spent thousands of dollars, preparing literature and mailing it to members of his wealth clubs.

He added Long also spent heavily in publishing his American Progress newspaper and on speaking tours, when he paid all his own expenses and refused to accept honorariums.

This year Long was appointed attorney for the Louisiana state tax commission. He drew down large fees by prosecuting suits for collection of unpaid taxes.

Italy Ships More Troops War Date Set, October 10

By Associated Press

Rome, Sept. 12—Their indifference toward League of Nations dealings with the Italo-Ethiopian crisis becoming edged with irritation, Italian officials dispatched a new mass of troops for East Africa today.

The great transatlantic liner Saturnia and the transport Cesare Battisti sailed aboard, in round numbers, 3900 troops and officers for an immediate departure from Naples, accompanied by the usual fanfare.

The troops—the Fascist blackshirt soldiers of the April 21 division, recently created by Premier Benito Mussolini — will arrive in East Africa almost simultaneously with the 2500 regulars of the Cosseria division, who left last night from Genoa.

October 10 was mentioned in diplomatic circles as the probable date for a beginning of hostilities. The diplomats said their information came from government sources, but the date could not be confirmed officially.

Ethiopian Emperor Hails British Aid at Geneva

By Associated Press

Addis Ababa, Sept. 12—Emperor Haile Selassie today expressed his profound gratitude for the British stand at Geneva backing the League of Nations covenant and opposing aggression.

"Thetide seems to have turned," said the Emperor, and smiled. "We face the future with renewed confidence.

"God, justice and the great powers appear to be on our side. Our prayers for peace may yet be answered.

"We will not be the first to draw blood. If war must come, we are prepared. We will yield to nothing further in the way of economic, political or territorial concessions to Italy. Our delegation at Geneva is so instructed."

France has asked Ethiopia for permission to bring in 180 colonial troops to help guard the Franco-Ethiopian railroad, especially at its great Hawash river divide, and also as a guard for the French legation.

Although government quarters appeared to regard France now as definitely on the side of Great Britain, it was said that the Emperor was not inclined to allow more foreign troops to enter the country because of the danger of disturbing the native Ethiopians who declare they are amply able to protect the lives of foreigners, including the French.

Hull Calls Hoare's Speech "Able, Timely"

Washington, Sept. 12—Secretary Hull today termed Sir Samuel Hoare's speech before the League of Nations urging economic sanctions against Italy as a very interesting, able and timely appeal for peace.

The secretary of state, however, declined any other comment on the Italo-Ethiopian crisis or on the efforts being made by Great Britain and other members of the League of Nations to achieve a peaceful settlement of the dispute.

Secretary Hull said the State Department was giving full attention to conditions and developments with a view to taking advantage of every possibility to co-operate in every practicable way, in the light of American policies for the preservation of peace.

1846 Families Aided

The Family Welfare Society of Boston aided 1846 families, including nearly 4000 children under 16, during the past month, former-Mayor Malcolm S. Nichols, general secretary, disclosed today in his monthly report.

Combats Cricket Invasion

(Picture From International News Photograph Service)

The proverbial cricket, chirping cheerfully on the hearth, may be well enough, by himself, but when he starts bringing his kinfolk indoors by the hundred, that's too much of a good thing in the opinion of Mrs. James L. Pickett of Quincy avenue, Quincy. She's one of many residents of the neighborhood now busy combatting an invasion of the shrill-voiced insects.

TEXTILE STRIKE PARLEY CALLED

Providence, Sept. 12—Members of the Providence, North Providence and North Smithfield Trades Councils of the United Textile Workers of America will meet tonight in Olneyville to discuss plans for a general textile strike.

The strike is planned as a protest against manufacturers refusing to accept the collective bargaining clause in the recent Wagner-Connery law, Seventeen local unions will be represented at the meeting.

Dissention began when officials of the Wanskuck Company, headed by United States Senator Jesse H. Metcalf and operating five plants in Rhode Island, and officials of the American Woolen Company, allegedly refused to deal with the union, particularly with regard to the new work price list.

Should a strike be called, about 22,000 workers will be affected.

Remington-Rand Manager Dies

Christopher Ryan, 52, of Bedford street, Lexington, Boston manager of the Remington-Rand typewriter division, died in his sleep today at his home. Physicians attributed death to heart disease.

Funeral services will be Saturday morning, with a solemn high mass in St. Bridget's Church.

Mrs. Mabel S. Brown Dead

Mrs. Mabel Stowell Brown of Boston and Marblehead Neck, wife of Frank Chouteau Brown, architect and writer on architectural subjects, died today in Peter Bent Brigham Hospital after a brief illness.

Business Growth 41 P. C. Since 1933

Business has increased to a point where today it is 41 per cent greater than at the low level in 1933 and 12 per cent above a year ago.

This was told today to delegates to the 22nd annual National Business Conference at Babson Park, Wellesley, by Ralph B. Wilson, vice-president of Babson's Reports.

With the rise, Wilson said, business is now only 19 per cent below normal.

"In due season we will reach normal line," he declared, "cross it and go into a period of so-called prosperity — over-expansion.

"If the building industry were operating at the same level that the automobile industry is, we would be at normal right now."

Gem Thief Faces 3 New Charges

Emil Smolenski, 24, of Carver street, South End, baby-faced burglar, was taken to municipal court today from Deer Island to face three new charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

He pleaded not guilty to breaks into Bigelow-Kennard Company, Leed's Fur Company, and Washington Jewelry Company. Bail was set at $2500 and he was held for the Grand Jury.

Smolenski is serving a 10 months' term imposed for a break at the Regan-Ripp Company store, where $2000 worth of jewelry was taken.

U. S. S. Pike Launched

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 12 (AP)—The submarine U. S. S. Pike, sister ship to the recently launched Porpoise, slipped down the ways at Portsmouth navy yard today.

Gas Station Robber Given 12 Years

Joseph Howard, 31, of Call street, Jamaica Plain, pleaded guilty today in Dedham Superior court to armed robbery of two Brookline gasoline stations. He was sentenced to 12 to 15 years in State prison by Judge Pinanski.

Howard and two other men, who have not been arrested, got $140 in the two holdups on the night of August 10 and fractured the skull of James Coughlin, one of the gas station managers, with the butt end of a revolver.

Gutelius Dies

North Bay, Ont., Sept. 12—Frederick Passmore Gutelius, 70, vice-president of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad and former general superintendent of the Canadian Pacific, died here today following a lengthy illness.

CRIPPLE CLAIMS PLOT TO FREE BANDIT PAIR

A crippled Lynn man, whose testimony yesterday sent two robbers to prison, today foiled an alleged plot to free them.

Lured into a trap by a girl, Bernard Donnelly, 27, of Greenwood place, Lynn, outwitted the alleged plotters and caused the arrest of three South End men.

According to the police, the three men threatened to have him arrested for a fictitious attack on the girl, unless he retracted his testimony.

The men arrested are Matteo Pugliano, 22, of Broadway; Rudolph Gainau, 21, of Cobb street, and Frank Carroll, 35, of Durham street.

SENT TO STATE PRISON

John Pugliano, brother of Matteo, and Abraham Cohen of Corning street, South End, received state prison terms yesterday in Dedham superior court for robbing Donnelly of $7.20.

"On my way home after midnight this morning, I got talking with a girl in a Charlestown restaurant," said Donnelly.

"She said she lived in Chelsea, and I offered to drive her home.

"She directed me on to Eastern avenue, and asked me to stop so she could light a cigarette.

"Then three men got out of a car parked a little way ahead.

"One of them said she was his wife. She got out and staggered, and he said I had doped her coffee.

"They said I had attacked her. They said they would forget it if I would go with them to a Dorchester lawyer and sign an affidavit the metropolitan police had forced me to lie.

"I refused but one of the men said, 'Let's plug him anyway,' so then I gave in. One of the men got in to direct me.

"I figured out a plan, I thought that if I went through a one-way street at a good speed, we would be stopped by a policeman.

"I drove through Park street near Chelsea square and the police station, and, sure enough, Patrolman Ahearn stopped me.

"I told him the story and he pulled out his gun and made the man with me sit tight. We saw another car turn into Park street, then back out when they saw the policeman."

TWO OTHERS ARRESTED

Police searched the district and arrested two other men near a car parked on Williams street. They said Carroll was the man with Donnelly.

In Chelsea court, the men were formally charged with compelling Donnelly to do something against his will by threatening to accuse him of a crime. Bail was set at $5000 each, double surety.

U. S. to Boost Nazi Taxes

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Washington, Sept. 12 — Germany on October 15 will lose all tariff reductions granted by the United States in reciprocal trade pacts, official sources made known today, because of asserted persistent and flagrant discriminations against American imports there.

The termination of tariff benefits, attributed to the State Department, was interpreted as instituting a new policy in American foreign trade.

Secretary Hull, it was learned authoritatively, has notified Dr. Hans Luther, the German ambassador, that after October 15 all German imports into the United States must pay the highest prevailing duty rates.

By this action, this country establishes for the first time in many years a two-column tariff schedule, one with normal rates for countries which grant equality of treatment for American goods, and another higher schedule for countries which discriminate against American goods.

"Pinholes" Caused Astor Yacht Blast

By International News Service

Providence, Sept. 12—"Pinhole" leaks in tubes on either side of the boiler of the John Jacob Astor III steam yacht Placida caused the "accident" off Newport, on September 4, Chief Engineer Frank H. Sofsky told the board of U. S. Steamboat Inspectors today.

The board is expected to return a decision within a week.

City Hall Notes

Nine cases of infantile paralysis, making a total of 285 Boston residents stricken since July 15, were reported to the health department today.

There are now 60 candidates for the Boston School Committee, the election department reported today. First of the group to file nomination papers was John C. Flaherty of Dorchester.

Expenditures of the welfare department last week were $156,947 as compared with $216,631 in the same week last year.

Mayor Mansfield received a letter today from Henry Bromley, a boy who has been ill in Coronation Hospital, Christchurch, New Zealand, for the past two years, requesting that Bostonians send him cancelled stamps for his collection.

Reduction of expenditures for last month was reported today by the soldiers' relief department. Expenditures were $62,361 as compared with $68,000 in August, 1934.

Long's Life Story

Problem Child Early

RULED AS PUPIL

FIRST LEARNED POLITICS AT 13, WORKING FOR NEWSPAPER

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of stories concerning the life of Senator Huey P. Long, whose amazing political career was stopped by an assassin's bullet in the state capitol which he dominated.

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service)

Washington, Sept. 11—On the morning of August 30, 1893, in the sleepy little township of Winnfield, governmental seat of Winn Parish, Louisiana, there occurred an event which attracted little attention at the time but was, nevertheless, epochal for the state.

A son was born that day to Huey P. Long, Baptist churchman, farmer and industrious father of six children.

The seventh child was promptly christened Huey Pierce. There is no record that use was ever made of the term junior.

Six of the children were husky. They had, in turn, readily taken their places as integral parts of the domestic machinery that is a rural Louisiana home and family.

The new arrival was somewhat skinny, frequently irritable as a baby, and accepted even the earliest chores entrusted to him with frank dislike. But when he started to school Huey took to learning with avid ease.

Prosperous days—as prosperity went in those times—came soon to the Long family. The township increased in population with expansion of railways and the consequent influx of sawmills and other industry.

Young Huey's father was fearful that the new and urban influences would do his children no good. So he bought a farm 10 miles back in the parish with the intent of moving there to live.

Father Forecast Even Shorter Life

The Long family never moved to the country, but one of the frequent wagon trips from Winnfield to the farm brought to the senior Long disquieting realization that city life was even at that early age influencing his young and precocious son.

Riding along with Huey, his father saw a dark stain drop out of the youngster's pocket. He picked it up. It was a plug of tobacco.

Years later, his father's glum observation at this time was recorded by the younger Long in his book "Every Man a King." He quoted the churchman parent as saying to him:

"If you stay alive until you are twenty-one, it will be the wonder of this world".

Young Huey's infractions of home authority and his thirst for worldly knowledge did not prevent his regular attendance at Sunday school, prayer meeting and church. That was compulsory in the Long household. It accounts for the comprehensive knowledge of and interest in the Scriptures which Huey carried through his turbulent life—and turned to advantage in both politics and business.

More and more, as school and the normal and necessary chores of a farmer's son shaped the course of young Huey Long, he interested himself in the life and thoughts of those outside the rural boundaries of Winn parish.

At the age of ten, he made his first attempt to run away from home—and managed to put nearly 50 miles behind him before he was caught. Two years later, he tried again, and was caught again.

Early in his 13th year, an important thing happened to Huey Long. Increasingly weary of cotton-picking, rail-splitting and mule-driving, he went to work in the printing shop of the weekly Winnfield Southern Sentinel, a country newspaper.

First Lesson in Politics at 13

There the youngster not only mastered a trade. He laid the real foundation for his career, and acquired the knowledge that later carried him to supreme power in Louisiana.

He learned, from the courthouse notices and other job printing contracts, that written words might be placed on a single sheet of paper and distributed to readers—whom he had not yet begun to identify as voters.

This discovery was specifically that which enabled him to ultimately sweep upward into power. Long's whirlwind political campaigns of later years depended for their effect and scope upon a system of circular distribution which Huey perfected to a fine art.

He ultimately built a machine that would permit delivery, within 24 hours, of his flyleaf campaign documents on the doorstep of virtually every voter's home in Louisiana.

Just about this time, the youngest member of the Long clan made another important discovery. He found out that he was a salesman.

Very probably at the time he gave no single thought to the fact that this, in the frugal community of Winn parish, meant he possessed powers of persuasion.

Long must have possessed a strong desire for money. An itinerant book agent came through the parish, auctioning his wares. For Huey to see this citizen of the outer world work was to copy his methods.

Soon, he and a schoolmate were book agents, and making a little money and a great many books at it.

Despite the printing shop and book selling activities, Long did not neglect his work at the high school in Winnfield. Far from it. He improved each shining hour in more ways than one.

High school taught Huey the rudiments of practical politics. Needless to say, there was no such course in the curriculum.

Huey was the ringleader in a little clique which sought to run things. They were the members of Long's first little political constituency, a rough and ready body of youngsters, exercising every means at hand to see that its members got all the chocolate off the top of the cake.

They did not, perhaps, recognize their activities as politics. Yet, the stories you hear and read of those early days reveal that the head man and his cohorts in that little organization could have taught many an old-timer a trick or two.

It is, perhaps, germane in this connection to say that Long wrote in his autobiography that in April, 1910, he went to the State rally, representing his school as debater, declaimer, mile runner and member of the relay team—and then naively added that he made no showing in any of the contests except debating.

In the debating contest, Long won a scholarship to the State University, which he was never able to use because of lack of funds.

The political operations of Long, and hard times which came along in 1910, were the propelling forces which sent the embryo political boss out into the world.

He did not mention it in his "Every Man a King", but his school "ring" was continually in hot water with the faculty, and he as its chief was expelled, according to the records.

Long touched on this specific period only briefly in his autobiography. He wrote:

"I saw no opportunity to attend the Louisiana State University. The scholarship which I had won did not take into account books and living expenses. It would have been difficult to secure enough money.

"I secured a position traveling for a large supply house which had a branch office in New Orleans."

In this manner, and at the age of 16, Huey Pierce Long of Winnfield stepped into the workaday world, to enter into a new era of training for the incredible and colorful career that was ahead for him.

(The second installment of the story of Huey Long will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

He Worried His Dad

WORKS TANGLE TACKLED BY ROOSEVELT

By GEORGE DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 12—Eight high-ranking work-relief officials went into conference with President Roosevelt here today and their problem was much more serious than the row between Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes and Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, which precipitated this meeting.

The big question mark that confronted Mr. Roosevelt and his aids was how to make good on the President's promise to have better than 3,000,000 men off direct relief and into work relief jobs by November.

Ickes and Hopkins, the two principals in the wrangle over expediture of the $4,880,000,000, faced each other across the Hyde Park conference table. That there was to be plain talk was inevitable. Ickes finally carried his differences with Hopkins to the newspapers direct and Hopkins rose quickly to a counter attack.

ICKES MIGHT RESIGN

It seems considered possible—but not altogther probable—that Ickes might resign from the Cabinet. Mr. Roosevelt does not want this and he is a past master at reconciling family quarrels.

But so far as the President was concerned, his biggest problem was how to get all of those unemployed men back at work on scheduled time. The Ickes-Hopkins row was secondary to him because that $4,880,000,000 program has been virtually allocated already.

The rub is that only $1,250,000,000 remains unallotted. Huge chunks of the money already promised were for heavy projects such as reclamation and irrigation, roads, the army engineers, low-cost housing, rural electrification and rural resettlement.

Government experts report there is little chance that these projects will begin showing appreciable employment before spring or later.

FIGHTING OVER MILLIONS

So Ickes and Hopkins are fighting over the billion and a quarter left, each convinced his method of spending is the only solution.

Just how hard they are battling may be deduced by the fact that Ickes tossed approximately 4000 public works projects into the hopper at the "eleventh minute—the deadline for applications is today—while Hopkins pushed in proposals totaling around $4,000,000,000.The Ickes projects would require about all the money that is actually left in the kitty.

In addition to Ickes, Hopkins and Walker, those who sat in with the President today really was a meeting of the allotment board—were Colonel Horatio Packett, director of housing under Ickes; Corrington Gill, statistician for Hopkins; Harding Director of the Budget Daniel W. Bell; Fred Morsides, administrative assistant to Walker, and Under Secretary of Interior Charles West.

CURLEY MEETS ROOSEVELT, ICKES TODAY

They are the President, PWA Administrator Ickes and WPA Administrator Hopkins.

The governor is motoring to the President's home in Hyde Park. He has an appointment at 2 p. m.

Ickes and Hopkins are at odds over approval of hundreds of projects to be inaugurated under the $4,800,000,000 work relief program. The clash is on what percentage shall go to labor wages.

PLEADS STATE CASE

Since Massachusetts' $60,000,000 "work and wages" program is threatened, Governor Curley is to plead his own case.

He is carrying with him plans for an $11,000,000 "farm to market" roads program, a $6,000,000 roadside beautification project, a $7,000,000 sidewalks construction project and a plan for a six-lane scenic highway in the western part of the state.

At the same time, the governor will urge establishment of an army air base at Governor's Island in Boston Harbor.

The governor is anxious to have the Army take over the island. If it won't, and persists in establishing its main air base at Springfield, as it forecast, he wants Governor's Island as a subsidiary base.

DISPUTE ON WAGES

The dispute about wages on PWA-WPA projects was taken up today by the Building Contractors' Association of Massachusetts, which forwarded a letter to the President, Ickes and Hopkins, saying:

"The Building Contractors' Association emphatically protests the ruling of Mr. Hopkins because he insists on work being done on a man-years expenditure based on a security wage.

"That decision makes it impossible for competitive bidding on contracts that must be based on the union rate of wages."

Watt's Two Jobs Puzzle A. F. of L.

By Associated Press

Springfield, Sept. 12—A special meeting of the executive council of the State Federation of Labor, of which John F. Gateles of this city is president, will be held tomorrow in Boston to discuss the situation created by apiopotment of Robert J. Watt to be member of the State Unemployment Insurance Commission.

Mr. Watt is secretary-treasurer and legislative agent of the federation and the question has arisen whether he can discharge the duties of both positions.

Loewe, of Danbury Hat Fame, Dead

By Associated Press

Danbury, Ct., Sept. 12—Dietrich E. Loewe, 83, retired hat manufacturer, who instituted proceedings that resulted in the famous Supreme Court Danbury hatters' decision, died suddenly today.

The decision, in 1908, held illegal and in restraint of trade a boycott against the D. E. Loewe & Company's product.

As a result of the boycott, the company instituted suit against 200 members of the United Hatters of North America and the company was awarded a judgment of $252,000 with costs.

BOSTON DAY AT BROCKTON FAIR

Brockton, Sept. 12—Today, Boston Day at Brockton Fair, was observed with athletic contests, cattle show, rodeo, guides' meet, dog show and other interesting events.

The fair grounds, thronged with thousands arriving by train, bus and plane, were honored by the presence of many city officials and business men. They were welcomed by Mayor Baker of Brockton and his official family.

Thousands visited the cattle show, which included some of the finest stock in years.

Another popular attraction was the dog show, where the wire-haired terrier was king.

Vandals Visit Lynn Scout Rooms

A police guard was placed over headquarters of Troop 21, Boy Scouts, at 8 Washington street, Lynn, today, following the third visit of vandals.

A group of boys, headed by a leader who described himself on the blackboard as "The Spider" and promised to return and cause further damage, wrecked the room last night.

Officials entering the quarters today to prepare for a fathers' and mothers' night observance tomorrow, found tables, desks, chairs and a trophy case destroyed.

The scheduled event set was cancelled.

Bay State Ads Go To Every State

More than a quarter of a million pieces of literature printed about the state were distributed throughout the country during June and July as part of the campaign to advertise Massachusetts.

The number of inquires convinced Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook every state inthe Union was interested. Cars from every state have been seen on the roads here.

REVERE MAYOR TELLS STORY OF BEATING

Mayor James M. O'Brien of Revere testified in Suffolk Superior Court today that he pleaded with Bob Jasse, former boxer, to use his fists instead of kicking him, in a beating allegedly administered to the mayor last July.

Jasse is on trial before Judge Vincent Grogna and a jury, charged with assault with intent to kill Mayor O'Brien in the latter's apartment on Pleasant street, Revere.

The accused was formerly a special policeman at Suffolk Downs race track and was discharged shortly before the alleged attack.

Mayor O'Brien testified that Jasse, after complaining at being discharged, knocked him down and then started kicking him.

"You can lick me with your fists, why do you have to kick me like that?" the mayor said he asked Jasse, as he lay on the floor.

WANTED TO KICK

Jasse replied, according to the mayor:

"I know that. But I want to kick you to ribbons."

Mrs. Mary Sullivan, who lives in the apartment above the mayor's, testified that she saw Jasse running from the mayor's door and tried to hold him.

"He broke away and ran down the stairs and I ran after him as far as the outside door," she said.

Mayor O'Brien testified that he arrived home from the Suffolk Downs race track about 6:20 on the evening of July 15 and Jasse called on him shortly afterward.

"I said, 'Hello, Bob,' and he replied, 'Hello, Jim.' Then we went out into the kitchen and Jasse said he wanted to know why he had been laid off as a special officer at the track.

RELATES CONVERSATION

"I told him I had placed Michael Hartigan on the job because Hartigan was on the welfare and Jasse had a job as special officer at a dance hall at Revere Beach.

"Out of 25 special officers at the track the number had been cut to 18. I had given Jasse the job in the first place.

"Jassee said it was O. K. But as I put my hand on the door knob to let him out the front way, I received the first punch on the side of the head. I went sprawling on the floor. Then he kicked me under the jaw. He gave me the boot three times and ran out."

Under cross-examination the mayor said he had been friendly with Jasse, but could not recall whether Jasse had helped in his mayoralty campaign. He said he picked the men who were to remain on the job as special officers at Suffolk Downs.

Interest was at white heat today as Mayor James O'Brien of Revere prepared to describe before the court the details of the brutal beating he received on the night of July 15. Mrs. Marion Jasse awaits the opening of court that she may see her husband, Robert Jasse, who, the state says, beat up the mayor after being ousted as a special officer.

FIRST LADY STOPS

Puts Hitch-Hiker in Rumble Seat

By Associated Press

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 12—The First Lady of the Land is not immune to the persuasiveness of the outstretched thumb, Otto E. Schaefer, University of Rochester senior of Oak Park, Ill., told chums today.

Schaefer worked this summer in a children's camp 20 miles from Hyde Park, the President's home town.

Hitch-hiking on his day off, Schaefer saw a dusty coupe with two lady occupants halt for him. The woman driving, whom he recognized as Mrs. Roosevelt, invited him to hop into the rumble seat.

The First Lady, her companion and the student kept up a pleasant conversation about summer camps and underprivileged children. When they reached Hyde Park, Mrs. Roosevelt was greeted by occupants of a large limousine.

She then told Schaefer she was going only as far as Hyde Park but would get him a ride in the other car. He thanked her and rode to Poughkeepsie with a group of officials whose identity he has been unable to learn.

Assurance he was right in his identification came when one of the officials asked him what Mrs. Roosevelt talked about.

Laura Ingalls Tries for Record

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, Sept. 12—Laura Ingalls hopped off early today on a projected non-stop flight to New York in an attempt to lower the West-East transcontinental record of Amelia Earhart.

The diminutive aviatrix, who recently made the first non-stop Mexico-to-West cross country journey by a woman flier, was determined to reach New York in less than 17 hours, 7 minutes 30 seconds—the time made by Miss Earhart.

Washington, Sept. 12—The farm administration will conduct a hearing on September 26 in Washington to determine whether a 1935 corn-hog program is necessary.

UNION LEADERS FIGHTS PLOT CHARGES

Philip P. Kramer, manager of the Cloak and Dressmakers Union, and Joseph Morbeto, business agent, surrendered to police today to answer serious charges based on violence alleged to have resulted from labor racketeering.

They are accused of conspiracy to kill and soliciting another to commit crime in connection with the shooting, last Friday, of Louis Weiner, Harrison avenue garment store proprietor.

Morabeto of North Shore drive, Revere, surrendered later to Detectives Goldston and Goodman, the police radical squad.

Josephs and Fontinallas were charged with assault with intent to murder.

All four pleaded not guilty. The union leaders supplied $500 cash bail each for appearance for hearing on September 27. The others were bailed in $2000 each for hearing September 23.

Kramer and Morabeto faced court with Joseph J. Josephs and Louis Fortinallas, South End men, accused of being two of the trio who threatened Weiner before the shooting.

Kramer declared that the charges against him and Morabeto are false. He declared that he had called in federal agents a year ago to probe "organization" of the Boston garment industry by Jack Darrish, slain Revere racketeer.

2 Die, 30 Hurt In Strike War

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 12—Two dead and over 30 wounded or beaten were counted today as the toll of a pitched battle between police and 4000 strike sympathizers at the Flour City Ornamental Iron Works.

Hundreds of police reserves patrol the day dawned and to prevent further disorder.

For six days, company officials have kept the workers inside, fearing for their safety if allowed to leave the grounds.

As the throng's temper rose to a frenzy and the leaders turned on police, riot guns were levelled and slugs tore into the packed mass of struggling strikers.

The two victims fatally wounded with shotgun slugs, believed to be from police guns, were Melvin Bjorkholm, 21, who died in the hospital about midnight and Eugene Casper, 18, who succumbed to stomach wounds several hours later.

Hauptmann Appeal Decision Delayed

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 12—Chancellor Luther A. Campbell, presiding member of the Court of Errors and Appeals, announced there will be no decision today in the appeal of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, doomed kidnaper-murderer of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr.

Observers feel Hauptmann, now a prisoner in the state's death house, must wait until mid-October before he will learn the outcome of his appeal from the death sentence. The Hauptmann case is listed as No. 99 on the calendar.

Morgenthau Sails For Europe

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 12—Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau will sail Saturday on the Italian liner Conte Grande for a month's vacation in Spain and Portugal.

"It is an entirely personal trip," the Treasury head said today. "I am not going to see any officials during my trip. I have asked the State Department to notify their attaches abroad that I am on vacation and desire to be left alone."

Bronco Bovine's Meal Costs $676

Because flowers in the garden of Mrs. Elsie H. Walker were sweeter than the grass Harold Nickerson's cow was accustomed to eating, Mrs. Walker is $676 richer.

In an opinion today the Massachusetts Supreme court upheld an award of $676 to Mrs. Walker by Judge James T. Kiley, in Quincy court.

In 1932, Mrs. Walker, whose property adjoins Nickerson's on Front street, Braintree, espied Nickerson's cow in her yard eating flowers.

She went to chase the cow away, but the cow butted Mrs. Walker, throwing her to the ground and causing injuries to her chest.

SUICIDE TRY IN CELL

Girl's Life Saved by Officer

Less than an hour after her arrest on a drunkenness charge today, Miss Shirley Hart, 23, of Western avenue, Cambridge, attempted suicide in a cell in Central square police station, according to Cambridge police.

The pretty titian-haired girl twined one end of her dress around her neck and tied the other end to a cell door bar, police said.

An officer, making the rounds, discovered her climbing the bars.

Shirley was arrested in Cenixa square with Jerome D. Cohen of Edgmont street, Brookline, a Boston broker, police asserted.

The broker was charged with disturbing the peace after he had called a policeman and had complained that the girl, who had accompanied him to the George-O'Mahoney bout, refused to go home.

Cohen, married and the father of one child, summoned Patrolman John J. McGilvary at 2 a.m., the policeman said, by shouting: "Police! Help! Police!"

Four all-night taxicab drivers, asleep in their cabs, awoke with a start and McGilvary rushed to the spot.

"I've been trying to get rid of this girl and I can't," declared Cohen, according to the officer. "She refuses to go into the house and I want to get home and get some sleep. We went to the Danno bout and she had a few drinks."

McGilvary urged the girl to go home. When she allegedly refused, he took them both to the station, a block away, and booked them.

Newburyport Pair Explain Flight

Newburyport, Sept. 12—No one could blame John Hanewich, 18, of Water street for liking Dorothy Stone, 20, of A street, but that wasn't why they eloped today to Providence.

It was fright, the couple explained, after they had been picked up by Providence police at 4 a. m. and returned to Newburyport—still unmarried.

Dorothy had a party last night in her home, and when things became dull, she said, John thought to enliven it by shooting out street lights with a rifle.

Neighbors complained to police and Hanewich was questioned. He promised to pay for the shattered bulbs.

Later he and Dorothy became frightened over the whole thing, they said, and decided to elope. They had hitch-hiked as far as Providence when they were picked up by police. They returned home.

CALLING ALL SINGERS

PROFESSIONAL AND NON-PROFESSIONAL

Enter THE TEXACO "RADIO OPEN"

An opportunity to win radio fame—a cash prize—and to sing on the nation-wide FIRE-CHIEF Program

There are many singers who haven't had the recognition they deserve. To give every singer—man or woman—(professional or non-professional) an opportunity to be heard, we are inviting them to enter the Texaco "Radio Open."

Each week auditions will be held in a different city. The best man and woman singer in each week's "Radio Open" will sing on the Fire-Chief Program with Eddy Duchin's Fire-Chief Orchestra. In addition to this opportunity of being heard by millions on a nation-wide network, they will each receive a prize of $100.

At the end of Summer, a notable jury will invite to New York (all expenses paid) the two winning men and the two winning women singers. There they will compete for the two grand prizes—$1000 to the winning man singer, $1000 to the winning woman singer.

If you don't sing yourself, you know someone whose voice deserves recognition. Get him or her to enter the Texaco "Radio Open" to try for radio fame and cash prizes.

HOW TO QUALIFY

IMPORTANT: In order to be considered, all applications must be received not later than Thursday morning, Sept. 19th. If you desire to enter, send in your application at once.

Write to Texaco, in care of Station WEEI, Boston, giving name, full address, telephone number, age, type of voice, and full musical experience.

AUDITIONS—When your application is accepted, you will be notified when to appear at Station WEEI, Boston, for your audition.

PRIZES—1. Two singers will be selected (one male and one female vocalist). Each will be awarded a prize of $100. Both will receive all expenses to and from New York, and will appear on the regular Fire-Chief Program Tuesday, Sept. 24, in New York.

2. There will be 16 qualifying broadcasts. At the end of 16 weeks the finalists will be selected.

They will be the two winning male singers and the two winning female singers chosen from the 32 local winners who appeared on broadcasts during the tour of the TEXACO "RADIO OPEN." The four national finalists will have all expenses paid to New York City and return to compete for the Grand Prizes of $1000 each, one for the men—one for the women. The two "runners-up" will receive $500 each.

3. The two female singers will appear on the first Fire-Chief Program in the Fall. One will be selected as a Grand Prize Winner.

4. The two male singers will appear on the second Fire-Chief Program. One will be selected as the other Grand Prize Winner.

JUDGES—The committee which will decide local weekly winners will include well known musical authorities in Cleveland.

Prevue of Famous Doll House To Aid Seven Charities

By BETTY ALDEN

WHEN ALICE SQUIRMED down the rabbit hole and stepped through the looking glass, she found herself in an elfin wonderland which has been the delight of children for generations . . . But the children of Boston, and even the grown-ups, will be able to view a miniature fairyland and meet a famous movie actress as well, without the difficulty of crawling through the rabbit hole or performing Houdini-like feats with the mirror, when, on Friday, September 20, a number of socially prominent people attend a prevue of Colleen Moore's famous Doll House in the annex of Jordan Marsh Company . . .

MRS. ALBERT C. BURRAGE, JR.

Miss Moore's interest in handicapped and underprivileged children is well known, and her desire to assist them is being realized at the exhibits of her Doll House, into the creation of which she has poured ten years of her own energy and imagination . . .

The trustees and directors of seven private charities have issued invitations for this event, which will benefit their organizations . . . the honorary committee is composed of eight prominent philanthropists, Mrs. James J. Storrow, Mr. Arthur Rotch, the Reverend Robert P. Barry, Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., Miss Sarah A. Hyams, the Reverend Harry Levi, Mrs. William V. McDermott and Mrs. George H. Monks . . . and the benefiting charities are the Boston Floating Hospital, the House of the Good Samaritan, the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital, the Catholic Charitable Bureaus, the Jewish Child Welfare Department of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, the New England Peabody Home for Crippled Children and the Prendergast Preventorium of the Boston Tuberculosis Association . . .

Among the patrons and patronesses for the prevue are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Amory, Mrs. Charles C. Cabot, Mrs. Henry B. Chapin, Mrs. George P. Denny, Mrs. Carl Dreyfus, Mr. Lawrence Coolidge, Mr. Frederic Curtiss, Mrs. F. Murray Forbes, Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell and Mr. Henry B. Sawyer, and about 100 more to be announced later . . .

Luncheon for Four Debutantes

IF YOU'VE ANY DOUBT that the new deb season is already under way, you should have dropped in yesterday afternoon at the Essex County Club in Manchester where four of the nicest girls were celebrating their informal entrance into the social whirl at a large luncheon . . . Everything was gay and chummy as sister debs crowded the terraces beyond the low rambling clubhouse to chat and talk over the exciting prospect of the fall parties, at the informal reception which preceded the serving of luncheon . . .

One would suspect that the advice of an artistic theatrical director had been followed in arranging the receiving line as the debutante hostesses formed a perfectly balanced quartet, two very fair and two dark brunettes . . . They were Barbara Brewer and Marion Lawrence, Anne Blake and Nancy Cassels, who received with their mothers, Mrs. Robert Brewer, Mrs. Richard Lawrence, Mrs. J. A. Lowell Blake and Mrs. J. Donald Cassels . . .

Put to the test for the first time this season as hostesses at their own parties, each of the debs scored a distinct success, and naturally enough each was dressed in one of her favorite summer dresses . . . Miss Brewer and Miss Lawrence, the blondes, wore pink and blue respectively; Miss Blake wore a mustard yellow print and Miss Cassels chose a frock of printed silk of red, green and white . . .

Among the many debutante guests were the sweet and rather shy Anne Wight, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delano Wight, who wore a becoming burgundy-colored wool frock . . . Elizabeth Marion of Concord, who smilingly obliged a photographer, confident that she cut a smart figure in her blue and white checked suit . . . Mimi Little, all her name implies, petite and vivacious, in bottle-green knitted dress, and Betty Titcomb wearing a beige wool frock with brown trimmings . . .

* * *

Leslie Eustis in Coarse Tweed Suit

PHYLLIS MOTLEY was a brilliant figure in crimson dress and hat and seemed to have much to talk over with Connie Matless and Jimmie Watson . . . The latter has inherited much of the warm radiant personality of her Southern parents, and from all appearances is destined to win the admiration and affection of her companions just as her post-deb sister, Lansdale Watson, did in her debutante year . . .

LESLIE EUSTIS, who enters the social whirl with the most aristocratic of family backgrounds, is tall and very blonde . . . She wore a coarse tweed suit with a smart little hat . . . They say still waters run deep and Anne Hutchins, petite and auburn-haired, though quiet and reserved on the surface, is a living example of this old maxim . . .

Priscilla Thorndike, whose brother will be married in a few weeks to Lucy Rantoul, arrived to take her place with the other leading lights of the new season, dressed in a raspberry outfit . . . Anne Howard was also there, making one last concession to summer in a light silk dress of green and white with a white straw sailor hat and white gloves and purse . . .

Sally Scudder, Fannie Burge, Patricia Preston and Isabel Gardiner all arrived together, and all wearing between season tweedy outfits . . . Revealing her flair for individual and tasty dressing, Edith Lewis wore a short leopard cape over a bright green woolen frock . . . Betty Watson and Polly Wardwell were there and also Marion Rogers, Winifred Palmer, Anne and Elise Sortwell, Marian McKean, Marileeds Heard, Fuzzy Fabyan in pale green, and Madge Burnett . . .

Activities of Boston Socialites

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the Greater Lynn Garden Club was held at the home of Mrs. William G. Keene on Grosvenor park this afternoon. Miss Bethany Brown gave a short talk on "Flowers of the Far North," and tea was served. Before the lecture the annual election of officers was held.

* * *

MISS MARION LAWRENCE, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lawrence of Beacon street and Manchester, who was one of the four debs feted at the Essex County Club yesterday afternoon, will be the honor guest at another affair later in the season.

Mrs. Frederic Winthrop of Berkeley street and Manchester will give a dance for Miss Lawrence, at her town house on Berkeley street on Saturday evening, November 16.

DEBUTANTE QUARTET HONORED AT LUNCHEON AT ESSEX COUNTY CLUB

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

NANCY CASSELS BARBARA BREWER MARION LAWRENCE ANNA BLAKE

DEBUTANTES of the new social season flocked to the North Shore yesterday for the luncheon at the Essex County Club in Manchester which honored four of the new buds. Garbed in summer frocks the quartet presented a charming picture as they received with their mothers. Miss Nancy Cassels chose a frock of red, green and white printed silk. Miss Barbara Brewer wore pink and Miss Marion Lawrence was gowned in blue. A mustard yellow print was worn by Miss Anna Blake. The luncheon also was attended by many post-debs.

Winchester Bride

Miss Harriet Gregory Weds

FOUR COUSINS and a sister lead the bridal procession at the wedding of Miss Harriet Gregory to Mr. John Swan Weatherley, in the Church of the Epiphany of Winchester this afternoon.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin E. Gregory of Winchester, wore a princess style gown of ivory satin, with a tulle veil falling from a cap of old family lace. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

RECORD SALES SPELL LOSS IN 'RAW DEAL'

Despite the fact that the Pepperell Manufacturing Company sold more cotton goods last year than in any previous year of its 83 in business, its net loss was nearly half a million dollars.

This fact was cited today by Russell H. Leonard, president and treasurer of the Pepperell company, to indicate the devastating effect upon the industry of the experimental legislation enacted in Washington.

The figures were furnished in Mr. Leonard's annual report, made at a meeting in the Pepperell plant, Biddeford, Me.

Stressing the fact that the company's net sales for the fiscal year ending June 30 amounted to $25,-966,092.12, he pointed out that the net loss was $438,062.92. The volume of business was the largest in the 53 years of the company's existence.

BLAMES GOVERNMENT

Leonard said:

"The operating results prove typical of the industry as a whole for the same period. Wherein lie the reasons for an essential industry remaining profitless under a governmental plan presumably dedicated to its rehabilitation?"

He declared:

"This economic principle was, in fact, at work in our industry for some years, but the National Recovery Act upset the working of this principle and facilitated and even encouraged—increased production. Paradoxically, shortening the weekly running time to forty hours expanded the output.

"Because the overhead costs of a mill on one shift of only forty hours' weekly operation becomes increasingly burdensome, mills running one shift per week were forced to increase to two shifts in order to compete with mills already on a two-shift basis.

"Disinterested students, as well as many men directly connected with the industry, agree that a single shift of fifty hours weekly could supply all the normal consumptive needs of the country."

ALSO HIT BY AAA

"The cost of producing cotton goods was further increased," Mr. Leonard asserts, "by another recovery measure, the Agricultural Adjustment Act. Under this act, processing taxes amounting to about 4c a pound were imposed on the processing of all cotton.

"These taxes were imposed to raise the money to pay the farmers for restricting the production of cotton. However, the market prices of cotton goods during the year were so low that it was not possible to pass all of these taxes on to our customers by adding them to the selling prices of our goods. This recovery measure, therefore, was a great handicap to progress.

"The floor stock taxes and processing taxes paid by this company since the Agricultural Adjustment Act went into effect have amounted to about $4,000,-000. All payments were made under protest.

"During the past winter a great deal was said about the inability of our manufacturers to compete with those of some other sections in the production of cotton textiles.

"It is certain that they cannot compete indefinitely unless the total costs, including labor, are on a competitive basis. The solution of the problem lies with the people of New England.

NORTHERN COSTS HIGHER

"If it costs more to produce a yard of the same cloth in Maine than it does in the South, then, eventually, the goods will be produced in the South.

"This is economics and not politics. No political harangues can alter the fact nor postpone for long the operation of this principle.

"And the producers in the lowest areas of the South will not raise their own costs in order to rehabilitate the marginal producer or to gratify New England sentiment.

"Only a small minority of the public are informed of the problem. There is, however, a large group of public officials who hope that some magical cure can be found. The plain truth is that there is none. The costs of production in New England must be kept in line with the costs of competing districts in the South or the New England mills are doomed."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief Of Pain

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief means of taking the acids and waste out of the blood. If they don't pass 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter, your 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing.

If you have trouble with frequent bladder passages with scanty amount which often smart and burn, the 15 miles of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

Don't wait for serious trouble. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—which have been used successfully for over 40 years by millions of people. They give happy relief and will help flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get DOAN'S PILLS.

They're Due to Be Married 'Within 24 Hours'

THOMAS C. NEAL — INEZ NORTON

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

They will be married within 24 hours, they say, but they don't mention within which 24 hours the ceremony will take place. Anyway, here are Inez Norton, former Follies girl, and Thomas C. Neal, Jr., son of a former Chicago bank president, "plotting" their elopement while dining out in New York. Inez is a former heart interest of the late Arnold Rothstein.

TRAFFIC BOARD ACTS ON "FIXER" PLEAS

"THE TROUBLE FIXER"

Public Service Department, Boston Evening American.

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests, nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

The Boston Traffic Commission reports on three suggestions made by Boston residents through this department:

First: Relative to the suggestion by A. H. T. of Townsend street, Roxbury, that a traffic signal be installed at the corner of Townsend street and Humboldt avenue.

"There are no funds available at this time for installation of traffic signals."

Second: Regarding the suggestion by L. W. of Woolson street, Mattapan, that Larkin street, Roxbury, be made one-way as a safety measure for children.

"The roadway width of Larkin street is only about 33½ feet, which makes it impossible to have two vehicles pass each other. This matter will be discussed at the next meeting of this Commission."

Third: In connection with suggestion by H. J. G. of Alleghany street, Roxbury, that Parker street, from Tremont to New Heath streets be made one-way.

"We are prohibiting parking at all times in both sides of Parker street, which will be in effect in a short time.

"There is no parallel which would conveniently take care of the traffic that would be prohibited from using Parker street if we made it one-way, as Terrace street, the nearest parallel route, is very poorly paved."

Palestine Surplus Now 28 Million

By Associated Press

Jerusalem, Sept. 12 (Palcor Agency)—The cash surplus on the Palestine government continues to mount, it was revealed today with the publication of figures showing that at the end of July, the treasury had a surplus of £5,727,600 —more than $28,000,000.

The Palestine currency in circulation at the end of August totalled £5,835,134—more than $29,000,000.

Hanging Stunt Fatal to Boy

New York, Sept. 12—Twelve-year-old John Zarcone said he'd show his two younger brothers how a man looked when hanged.

So he went out into the garage, looped his belt around his neck and tied it to a rafter. He jumped off the stepladder.

MONOXIDE KILLS Yale Sophomore

Newark, N. J., Sept. 12—Gordon Hollander, 20-year-old Yale University sophomore, was found dead from carbon monoxide gas poisoning in a rented car in the garage behind his home here.

MEXICAN SLAIN AS SOLONS FIGHT

By Universal Service

Mexico City, Sept. 12—One Mexican deputy was killed and three others seriously wounded in a gun battle in the Chamber of Deputies.

The death followed an argument over whether or not the legislators should receive 5000 pesos each (about $178) as a bonus for passing President Cardenas' legislative program.

Imported gunmen, firing from the galleries, were accused of starting the pistol fight in which 50 shots were fired.

The slain deputy was Martinez Valadez, from the state of Jalisco. Those wounded were Deputies Prazedes, of Tamaulipas; Louis Mendez of Guanajuato and Mariano Vertes of Oaxaca.

An extra session of the legislature was called when President Cardenas refused to grant the "tips" or "gratificaciones" as they are called in Mexico.

It is an old Mexican custom to grant such "tips," according to the minority party which was trying to override the president's veto.

Papa Asks Inez Norton 'Pre-View'

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 12—Whether Ines Norton, one-time constant companion of the murdered Arnold Rothstein, will marry Thomas Neil, Jr., son of a wealthy retired Chicago banker, appeared today to be a question.

Neil, Sr., has demanded a "preview" of the prospective bride, and will fly here tomorrow. Until then the nuptials must wait.

If father disapproves it's all off, so far as he is concerned, it was learned. Young Neil, however, is 24, with the right to decide for himself whether he will wed the blonde Ines or not.

The complications, so far as the prospective bride and groom are concerned, followed reports the banker, who holds the purse strings to the Neil fortune, will cut Thomas, Jr., out of his will should he wed without parental sanction.

Accused Gibson Seeks Everett Post

Harold J. Gibson, 28, indicted on 24 counts of larceny totalling $3500 from the city of Everett, today became a candidate for alderman. Gibson is a former clerk in the office of the city collector.

He is due for trial on the larceny charge during the October term of Middlesex Superior court.

NEW RUM ROW DRIVE ORDERED BY ROOSEVELT

Disclosure that a new Rum Row is in existence off the Atlantic Coast, approximately one-third of the magnitude of the produce of Prohibition, was made today.

And, as in pre-repeal days, the smugglers are concentrated off New England, particularly in the area around Nantucket.

So pronounced has been the growth in smuggling during the past few months that the Coast Guard has just received new orders directly from the President.

Two secret executive orders creating smuggling zones extending 50 miles out to sea, have been signed by President Roosevelt, it was learned. The area the zones include will be announced next week.

An American rum-running syndicate, born out of recent successful ventures, is unloading ships from Norway and Holland with the aid of Canadian smugglers, Coast Guard officials said.

First inkling of the situation came today when eight Coast Guard ships were dispatched from New London, Ct., to trail a foreign steamer reported lying off Montauk Point, L. I.

Five smaller and speedier vessels had joined the "mother ship," officials were warned.

All are without the 12-mile treaty limit, but under the new anti-smuggling law which the President signed, Coast Guards have the right to board any ship of American registry even outside this limit.

From Maine to New Jersey there are about 40 ships now engaged in illicit transportation of liquor, it is said.

These ships carry—and have landed—as many as 15,000 to 25,000 cases of liquor each, according to Coast Guards.

'Let Me Call You Sweetheart' Wins $5 Bill

With a fitting parody Katherine N. Fisher, 1167 Boylston street, Boston, apes the Congressional version of "Let Me Call You Sweetheart" sung as the concluding number of Congress's ten thousand million dollar spending spree.

"Let me call you sweetheart
While I'm taxing you;
There'll be other billions, dear,
I will take from you.

"So, until the headache—
When the bills come due,
Let me call you sweetheart—
'Til the laws go through!"

AMERICAN OIL COMPANY

HOLLAND

FILM Scouts Hound Boston's Rialto

By GEORGE HOLLAND

I am given to believe that one of the picture companies has contracted Reginald Gardner of "At Home Abroad" to play before its cameras as soon as he finishes his contract with the producers of that show.

Mr. Gardner was a resounding success at his American premiere here, and a picture scout was in the audience.

George Holland

If my information is correct, you may see on the same screen within a comparatively short space of time the able Mr. Gardner and Eleanor Powell, who is also in "At Home Abroad," because Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which has a lien on Miss Powell's services, is the signor, I hear, of Mr. Gardner.

* * *

There is more local news which has to do with a screen company's enterprise in Boston, albeit it is not strictly within the province of a theatrical column to discuss it.

Al Schacht, the third-base brain of the Boston American Baseball Club, is being sought by one film outfit through its Boston casting scout.

This came to this department's attention at the Dan Carroll dinner last night, after Mr. Schacht had rendered his listeners incapable of further laughter with a routine of experiences and stories that were quite as funny as any you will hear this season.

* * *

"He is very comical," I remarked and a dear friend of Mr. Schacht's happened to hear the remark.

"He is all of that," agreed Mr. Schacht's friend, "and it is about time that his art is given additional auditoriums to those of the various grandstands, pavilions and bleachers of the American League ball-parks."

* * *

This, Mr. Schacht's friend, is a local scholar, a former college ball player (Yale) who has gone on to civilian success in the sporting world.

"Yes, Al is very funny," went on the friend. "He has natural humor." Then I met Mr. Schacht.

* * *

His "life-story," from the days in the cradle when passers-by failed to stop to comment on his beauty, until the present when he alleges against himself that he gazes in a mirror and screams: "It's a lie!"—is a masterpiece.

Later when Eddie Elkins, the handsome band-master of the Brunswick, Casino, yielded his baton to Mr. Schacht, and when Mr. Schacht proceeded to lead the Elkins' bandsman in a hilarious rendition of "Blue Moon" and "Tiger-Rag," a close observer could come readily to a conclusion that the Hollywood overtures are shrewd, very shrewd.

* * *

Thinking back over Mr. Schacht's yesterday, and realizing that the dapper coach of the Red Sox, before his evening's exercises, had whistled good cheer to several thousand fans who sat through a pasting given the Sox by the Chicagos, this department was forced to envision a bright future for three visiting townsmen.

* * *

Eleanor Powell is destined to be the most sensational dancing girl of the filums. Mr. Gardner will be an undoubted success in Hollywood. Mr. Schacht has more versatility, with a fair smattering of talent, than either Miss Powell or Mr. Gardner, or, say, Joe E. Brown.

Songbird

Frances Langford, the darling of the studios, sings the hit tunes in George Raft's latest picture, "Every Night at Eight," which opens at the Uptown Saturday.

Yukon Survivors Invited

All those who can furnish authentic proof of their participation in the famous Yukon Gold Rush, are invited to be the guests of H. M. Addison, division manager, at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters during the engagement of the "Call of the Wild," which opens tomorrow.

Ex-prospectors of the days of '97, about which Jack London wrote his famous story, will be admitted free of charge at both theaters.

Gayety's Bill

Today's features at the Gayety include "Under the Pampas Moon," with Warner Baxter and Ketti Gallian in the principal roles, and "A Notorious Gentleman."

Marion Talley to Star in 'The Tales of Hoffman'

Los Angeles, Sept. 12—Marion Talley, the Kansas songbird whose brief appearance in grand opera was the subject of much commet, is now in Hollywood. She is to be starred by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in "The Tales of Hoffman" of Offenach, which gives her the type of classical music best suited to her voice.

Vicki Baum, eminent novelist, is preparing the treatment and script of "The Tales of Hoffman" will be offered to the music-loving and movie going public.

One of these days we are going to wake up and find that Patsy Kelly has become a star. Her comedy is unique and she is occupying a place similar to that of Zasu Pitts as the most eccentric comedienne on the screen. Furthermore, she appears in more pictures than Zasu and at the moment is in demand at every studio.

Patsy moves over to Paramount now for the Charles R. Rogers picture, "Easy Living" and if that does for her what Marion Davies' picture, "Page Miss Glory" did for her, Patsy will be riding high.

* * *

I am really sorry that Jack Gilbert didn't get the role of Lavasseur in "Captain Blood." Jack looks as grand these days and it would have been such a marvelous role to bring him back but Basil Rathbone was given the part today.

Rathbone has been tremendously successful in these sinister villain roles he has played on the screen.

* * *

The report that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has purchased the screen rights to Mary Pickford's "Demi-Widow" is a little previous. Mary is asking for a good stiff price and up to today she and the film company had not gotten together on price.

If they meet her demand or if a compromise is effected Mary's first novel will be pur-sased for Joan Crawford, who s one time was Mary's stepaughter-in-law.

Joe E. Brown, in his latest First National comedy romance, "Bright Lights," will be the feature of the new program opening tomorrow at the Scollay.

The comical Joe is the star in a back-stage romance, and he sings, dances and does acrobatics in his biggest and best role to date.

Ann Dvorak, Patricia Ellis and Joseph Cawthorn appear in the supporting cast.

This Is Life

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

To continue with the question of tourist overnight cabins.

My contention is that there is a modest fortune in the business for proprietors who will make an effort to provide comfortable accommodations and who have some sense of what the conveniences of lodgings are.

Personally, if I can draw the car up to the side of a cabin, leave most of the duffle—impedimenta to you! — in it without any complicated business of getting it into an inn, get out and Robert E. Rogers early as you wish without bothering about a set breakfast—there is your most comfortable way of touring.

But—here are the minimum requirements, if a proprietor wishes to have his camp remembered and advertised by word of mouth.

Strong metal beds, preferably with inner spring mattresses. (The thin, one-layer mattress is only a torture.) At least two heavy (meaning heavy) blankets.

The cabin keeper who gives you one double cotton blanket and a thin coverlet does not deserve to go to the hot place.

He will go to the Scandinavian hell where it is very cold.

Not merely running water but hot running water. Not merely water running in a basin but a hot shower. The cabin keeper who can advertise these honestly will always have guests.

But it must be honest advertising. Frequently it isn't.

At one place where we stopped the owner suggested that if we wanted warm water in the morning we "wood up" the old stove and heat the water all night.

Another penny-wise, pound-foolish owner, whose cabins were brand new this summer and had really hot running water, good beds and good inside toilets, could have added hot and cold showers at very little extra expense, but didn't.

Landlord Sense

This same proprietor was also an example of lack of the landlord sense, in other words, the little things that make you comfortable.

He had an electric hot plate, but not a single hook on the walls to hang your clothes, nothing but a row of bare nails.

That is a combination of plain Yankee meanness and crass lack of thoughtfulness.

Also there wasn't a chair you could live in comfortably. Two old fashioned bent wood chairs with a set-seat barely large enough to perch on.

The closet was about as comfortable as a full cell or a Trappist cubicle.

Now a very few dollars and a very little time and some thought and imagination would have made this man's cabins a place you would look forward to eagerly and remember gratefully.

It is in the appointments and furnishings of such cabins that the Yankee's worst characteristics come out—unnecessary stinginess and penny-pinching and plain dumb lack of the sense of comfort.

This proprietor owned a large general store, garage and gas station, but the little things that make a room to sit and sleep in just were not there.

He ought to take some lessons in cabin comfort.

Then there's another I remember, a well known one, that had a good many of the comforts and appointments, but you touched everything with the tips of your fingers for the accumulated dust and dirt and you took great care not to let the blankets touch the face.

Nothing real wrong, just a long accumulated slackness in cleaning. One of the cases where one elderly man did all the work for ten or eleven cabins himself.

Can't Be Done

Obviously that cannot be done. The same kind of daily cleaning that would have to be done in a lodging house must be done in the cabins. But only too often it is not done.

I am reluctantly forced to the conclusion that the individual and unusually amateur cabin keeper needs discouraging.

I mean anybody who decides to thin out a wood patch, throw up some shacks, erect a community privity and a community room with running water for the lot, string up one naked electric light bulb of 25 watts in every shack, add a hot dog stand, charge two dollars a night, and thinks he is catering to the tourist trade.

I suggest that some enterprising person or group with some capital and some knowledge how to run a successful inn start out with one set of cabins which will 100 per cent perfect in the way of not too expensive comforts.

Try them out on the dog for one summer. Then go ahead and put up a chain at strategic points on important highways along the holiday routes.

Advertise, ballyhoo your comforts. Add 50 cents or a dollar to the common price. Then sit back and watch them pack in.

As I say, I have heard that the South and West are far ahead of us in these particulars. New England would take to comfort as kindly as any section.

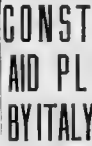
I suggest that the amateur Yankee trying to carry his pet spartan economies into the business of providing for the public comfort is on his last legs.

Someday he will wake up and find himself in the discard, while the experts and professionals gather in the profits.

CONSTITUTION AID PLEDGED BY ITALY'S SONS

More than 15,000 members of the Order of the Sons of Italy in America today pledged their allegiance to uphold and support the Constitution of the United States.

The order, through Judge Felix



Forte, also notified members of the National Constitution Day Committee that it had unanimously accepted the committee invitation to participate in Constitution Day exercises in Faneuil Hall, Tuesday, September 17.

Judge Felix Forte

Judge Forte, after making the announcements, issued the following statement:

"The Order of the Sons of Italy in America, consisting of about 15,000 members in Massachusetts, though proud of their ancestry and extraction, stand for the fundamental principles embodied in the Constitution of the United States.

"There will be undoubtedly a very large representation of the organization at your two meetings on Constitution Day."

BUSINESS LENDS AID

Archibald R. Girpux, chairman of the National Constitution Day Committee, said today that he had received increasing support from leading business organizations throughout the state.

Many industrial firms in Boston are distributing copies of the Constitution of the United States to their employes.

Here in the copy is a letter in which J. Dudley Clark, senior partner of the firm, makes the following statement:

"Today, perhaps more than at any time in the history of the United States, public interest is centered on the Constitution. We are, therefore, pleased to present you with this copy.

EXPERIENCED IN ABUSES

"The Constitution was written by men learned in the law and adept in government and politics. They were experienced in the abuses inseparable from too much government and the evils inherent in too little government.

"The proof of their wisdom and judgment is evidenced by 145 years of social and industrial progress without equal in the history of the world.

"To enact legislation without regard to its constitutionality is tantamount to striking down the keystone of the arch of our government.

Other Massachusetts firms co-operating include the Bell Company, Worcester; John Hood Company, Boston; Eder Manufacturing Company, Plymouth; Johnson-Appleby, Cambridge; Noyes-Perkins G Company, Taunton, and the Foxboro Company, Foxboro.

The public has been invited to attend both meetings to be conducted in Faneuil Hall.

MEAT PRICES UP 18 TO 94 P. C.

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept 12 — The amounts meat prices have increased in the last two years were tabulated today by the labor department.

Since August, 1933, the following average increases were reported

Sliced bacon, 85.9 per cent; pork chops, 86.3; sliced ham, 59.5; chuck roast, 51.3; plate beef, 60; rib roast, 57; round steak, 39.6; sirloin steak, 39.9; hens, 42.4; leg of lamb, 18.2, lard, 122.6.

Retail food prices in general have gone up 14.9 per cent.

Charlestown Fires Cause Inquiry

Suspicious fires in two vacant Charlestown tenement houses were investigated today by police and the state fire marshal's office.

Late last night flames from rubbish in the basement of a two-family house at 11 Armory street reached the second floor, causing damage estimated at $1000.

Five hours later, fire was found beneath the rear stairway on the ground floor of a vacant three-story wooden building at 13 Frothingham avenue. Loss was only $50.

Yukon Tale On Twin Screens

"Call of the Wild," Jack London's thrilling story of the Yukon gold rush, comes to the screen at both Loew's State and Orpheum tomorrow.

Clark Gable and Loretta Young have the star roles, with Gable as the picturesque prospector ready to stake his fortune at the flip of a coin, and Miss Young as the daughter of a wealthy frontiersman.

A Thelma Todd-Patsy Kelly comedy, "The Misses Stooge," "Pitcairn Island," and the latest Hearst Metrotone News reels complete the Loew program.

Bing Crosby has Joan Bennett for his co-star in "Two For Tonight," musical comedy romance, which takes over the screen at the Metropolitan tomorrow.

Another highlight of the new program is the return to the conductor's stand of the popular music master, Fabien Sevitzky. For his first program of the fall season, Sevitzky will present the Grand Orchestra in a special arrangement of Verdi's "Aida."

"Two for Tonight" is the story of an ambitious young crooner, who becomes a playwright over night and gets himself involved with a theatrical producer and his girl friend.

Mary Boland, Lynne Overman, Thelma Todd and Ernest Cossart head the supporting cast, and the Gordon and Revel songs crooned by Bing are "I Wish I Were Aladdin," "Two for Tonight," "Without a Word of Warning," and "Takes Two to Make a Bargain."

Nation's Ace Detectives

The fans of Britain's Scotland Yard are world-wide. But there are 3000 man-hunters, among them the foremost detectives in the world, whose business address is at the offices in the United States Treasury Department in Washington.

They are the "special agents" of the Intelligence Bureau. Their chief is Elmer Irey, veteran of the postal service and other crime detection bureaus. There's more drama than a thousand stories could set forth in their lives and activities.

Some of the most exciting of their exploits are set forth in Warner Brothers' Cosmopolitan production, "Special Agent," in which George Brent and Bette Davis will soon star on the screen at the Metropolitan.

NOW PLAYING AT THE PARAMOUNT & FENWAY THEATRES

Volts!

The "About Faces" cartoon, daily feature of the Boston Evening American, presents the stars who are appearing on the screen in the double bill at the Paramount and Fenway Theaters.

The attractions at these favorite houses are "The Gay Deception," with a great continental cast, and "Hare Comes Cookie," a Paramount comedy with radio's goofiest nuts, as well as a huge Broadway cast.

The Boston Evening American is giving away every week, 20 guest tickets and $15 in cash to the winners of the "About Faces" series.

By filling in the squares near the cartoons of the stars answering the question about the career of one of the players, you become eligible to share in the grand awards. Mail your solutions to the "About Faces" Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston.

The names of winners will be published on Saturday. Use the clue-letter "R" and the dramatic page of the Boston American as guides.

FARM WOMAN BOOMED FOR G. O. P. SLATE

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 12—Mrs George B Simmons, Missouri farmer's wife who rocketed into the political spotlight with a "grass roots" speech in June, was proposed for the vice-presidency today as the Republicans' best hope in 1936.

Her name was advanced by Mrs Jean O'Haver Shassere, famous as the only woman salesman of steel

In addition to the "women's vote down to the last woman," Mrs Shassere said

"Mrs. Simmons could command the ballots of the farmer and his wife because she is one of them.

"She knows her cows and chickens, not from theory but from actual experience.

"She would appeal to the city housewife in her plea for lower food costs, not plowing under or destroying but raising more of everything."

"Mimi" Shurtleff Dies in Florida

Sebring, Fla., Sept. 12—Mrs George B. Shurtleff, 63, mother of Mrs. Rex Beach and Mrs. Fred Stone, died at her home here following a heart attack.

Mrs. Shurtleff, whom stage and literary folk knew as "Mimi," became ill last Thursday.

INFANTILE DROP RECORDED

Washington, Sept. 12—The 1935 infantile paralysis peak apparently was past today, with the public health service recording a drop to 1007 new cases last week from the high of 1058 cases for the week ending August 31.

This year's epidemic thus failed to equal the 1931 high of 1370 cases for the peak week, and fell far below the all-time high of about 3000 new cases in the peak week of the 1916 outbreak

States in which incidence continued high were Massachusetts with 169 cases of which 19 were in Fall River; and New York, 414, of which 90 were in New York city.

Coolidge's Friend Curran Dies

By Associated Press

Attleboro, Sept. 12—Joseph V Curran, 74, postmaster of Attleboro, a close friend of the late Calvin Coolidge, died here today

Mr. Curran, born in Providence, was an employe of the New Haven railroad for 43 years before he retired to become postmaster in 1923

Although his term expride last February, he had not officially transferred his office to his successor, named a few weeks ago.

His survivors are a son, George D., and a daughter, Mary E.

INFANTILE Now on Wane

Sharp falling off of new infantile paralysis cases here and in Fall River is considered by medical authorities and indication that the course of the disease is definitely on the wane.

So certain are Fall River authorities that they will consider tomorrow the opening of the schools in the very near future.

Miss adamowska is secretary of the children's theater department of the Association of the Junior League of America.

Her mother, the former Antoinette Szumowska; her father, the late Jozef Adamowski and her uncle, Timothee Adamowski, composed the Adamowski trio, famous throughout the United States

STORM BATTERS SOVIET SHIP

By Associated Press

Moscow, Sept. 12—The Soviet ice-breaker Sadko, with an expedition of scientists aboard, reported by radio that it is prey to a terrific storm in the northern part of an unexplored area east of Franz Josef Land

The expedition, which recently reported the discovery of three islands, was caught in the storm while investigating a deep open water channel connecting the Kara sea with the Polar basin.

Enormous waves are breaking over the decks washing away everything not secured, throwing furniture about and smashing china The scientists not confined to their beds are helping the crew lash down the cargo. The message added

Grinnell Faces Vermont Charges

Edward Grinnell, accused as a bad check passer, who still insists he is a Beacon Hill socialite and heir to millions, is on his way to court in Montpelier, Vt., today.

His automobile tour, begun at Bretton Woods, N. H., in the heart of the White Mountains, ended abruptly at Westport, N. Y.

Harold Wright, 20-year-old Fabyans, N. H., youth who was chauffering Grinnell, gave the "tip" that caused Grinnell's arrest, police said.

Wright, and Miss Phyllis Goding, 22, a nurse attached to the Whitefield, N. H. hospital, are on their way home, Grinnell took them with him when he started off from Mount Washington Tuesday afternoon.

At Montpelier Grinnell is charged with having passed a worthless $20 check. In New Hampshire authorities say he left bad paper for much larger amount

Just as he flew to Bretton Woods from Providence, R. I., Grinnell is reported to have been about to fly to New York City from Westport when he was taken into custody.

Police in Boston are baffled in trying to establish the 30-year-old man's true identity. The address he gave in Beacon street is false they say.

Grinnell is quoted as saying that Dr. Edward Sandon of Cambridge, physician attached to Boston's municipal court, could identify him. Dr. Sandon said he can't place the man

Grinnell took the nurse with him after he had had two "heart attacks" in New Hampshire Dr H T. French gave a worthless check for $65 for treating him

Dr. French said that he thought Grinnell was "mentally abnormal." So do police

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 12—How hard Congressmen worked during the first session of the 74th Congress was reflected in final figures today showing 840 new laws.

That number included 358 private claims authorizations, and compared with 978 enacted during the entire preceding Congress and 843 in the whole 72d Congress.

Apparently if the Congressmen had had their way, there would have been some 13,000 new laws, public and private. But only about one in each 16 measures introduced were adopted

Dying Boy Found In Freight Car

A youth who feebly gave the name George Savoy and then mumbled Gardner and Fitchburg, was found unconscious from a fractured skull in a Boston and Maine freight car in Lechmere square, Cambridge, today

Police believe he had received a beating either in Gardner or Fitchburg and then was hurled into a Boston-bound freight car

The youth was found by Richard A. Skane, railroad police officer, shortly after the freight car arrived from Greenfield. He was taken to Cambridge City Hospital, where physicians say he may die

We distillers invite you to taste our own family's whiskey

I guess you've probably wondered what our own family's whiskey would be like—and maybe you've thought you'd like to get a taste of it.

I'll grant you we distillers make quite a fuss over it, and everybody that comes over and samples a nip of the Wilken Family's Whiskey gets powerfully enthusiastic about its mildness—and allow it has a smacking good flavor you can put up against any whiskey at any price.

I think it's mighty nice of folks to praise our family's whiskey like that. But what tickles me is now that we've put this whiskey of ours in regular bottles for sale, everybody seems to go for its mildness and flavor. I kind of expect you will, too!

DANNO WHIPS GEORGE WITH 'WHIP'

Irishman Winner Before 25,000

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 12, 1935 13

Ballydehob

King Retains World's Wrestling Crown

By Jack Conway

Dan O'Mahoney, 22-year-old Irish sensation, is today the owner of the $10,000 diamond-studded championhip belt as a result of his victory over Ed Don George after 2 hours and 5 minutes of stirring wrestling before 25,000 persons at a Paul Bowser show at Fenway Park.

It was the second time O'Mahoney has conquered George. There was no Long Count in the Fenway Park tussle. O'Mahoney crashed George to the canvas with his famous "Irish Whip" for the winning toss.

George had a slight edge on O'Mahoney in the matter of wrestling up to the time Danno made his dramatic surge for victory. It had been a battle between George's strength and wrestling ability against O'Mahoney's tremendous power and terrific punching ability

ED'S ARM CUT

Don tried to win with a flying tackle. He butted Danno against the ropes, and then pulled back and cut loose with a tackle. George missed his target, and his head struck one of the ring posts. Ed's right arm was cut a few inches below the shoulder when he hit the ring post.

George's right arm hung by his side when he resumed wrestling. He tried to hold Danno off with his left. The Irishman grabbed Don's injured right arm and applied his famous Whip. George was thrown, but avoided being pinned.

O'Mahoney swarmed all over George and barraged him with left and right hand punches. Don fought back courageously, but was nailed by another "Irish Whip" and pinned in 2h. 5m.

PUNCHFEST

The big fellows were cautious in the early stages of the bout. Danno then moved in quickly and dropped Don to the canvas with a body scissors. The Irishman applied great pressure and punished George considerably.

After George broke clear of the hold, he hit O'Mahoney on the jaw with two hard right hand punches. Don moved back quickly before Danno could punch back at him

George locked O'Mahoney's left arm between his legs and held the Irishman helpless for five minutes. Danno finally got clear of the hold only to get nailed by it again This time it took O'Mahoney three minutes to get clear.

The big fellows forgot wrestling while they traded blows. Danno bounced a couple of rights off George's jaw only to get nailed with left and rights to the chin.

WHIP WORKS

Don stepped in quickly, clamped on a toe hold and dropping Danno to the mat. The Irishman didn't lose any time in kicking his way clear.

During a wild mixup along the ropes, O'Mahoney nailed George in the mouth with a wild right hand punch. One of George's teeth was knocked out by the blow.

The pace slowed down after the half-hour mark had been passed. George and O'Mahoney were both a bit tired.

The Irishman drove his way to close quarters and dropped George with a body hold. Danno then seized Don's left arm and locked it between his legs. He subjected Don to the same kind of punishment he had received himself in GEORGE PUNISHES DANNO!—Ireland's youthful heavyweight wrestling champion had a struggle on his hands when he retained his title against Ed Don George at Fenway Park after two hours and five seconds of grueling battle. Here is George applying a torturous toe hold to the Irish mat king, and while Danno groaned and moaned he refused to quit and finally broke the hold and flopped George for the count with his famous Irish whip. A crowd of 25,000 packed Fenway Park last night to witness this return classic and Danno clearly demonstrated his superiority over George, who finally relinquished the $15,000 diamond belt. It was the outstanding victory in the short career of the boy from Ireland. Danno will engage in three more bouts before returning home to the old folks.

MUSICK RESTLESS CRAVES EXCITEMENT

GETS IT WITH REDSKINS

By Murray Kramer

Jim Musick is a mild-looking and well-bred young man with one obsessing habit—he craves excitement!

The 195-pound Redskin fullback gives the first impression of the young man a co-ed would like to bring home to introduce to her aged maiden aunt as the modern version of ideal American youth.

Last year Jim gave up football to become a deputy sheriff in Orange County, California, which is situated between Los Angeles and San Diego Counties, if that means anything. He chased burglars, investigated crime cases and had a great time.

There was plenty of potential excitement there, but not much actually materialized, and last spring Jim decided that there are more thrills on a football field, than in playing cops and robbers.

He realized that his absence from the game might hurt and decided to get into shape last spring. He spent six months playing handball, and the results were amazing.

TEAM WORK

Jim reported last week lighter than he has been any time since he was graduated from the University of Southern California in 1932. He now weighs 195 pounds and is faster than he was back in 1933 when he starred for the Redskins.

When questioned as to his opinions regarding the Redskins for the coming season, Jim said:

"I honestly believe we have the best outfit we have ever had. Regardless of what people think, it takes time to build morale and spirit on a pro team.

"We now have a group of 18 who have been together two or three years, and we all know each other's type of play and are pulling together.

"I don't know just how many games we will win, but you can be certain that we will be better than ever before," concluded Jim.

WRAY A DRIVER

Musick's strained ligament is responding nicely to treatment . . . he expects to be ready to lead his Mustangs against Shepherd's Lambkins at Framingham Sunday . . . another member of the injured list is Swede Olson . . . he had his cheek pierced by a cleat last week and a slight infection has set in . . . it is not serious.

Lud Wray is as much a slave driver as ever . . . he has his Philadelphia Eagles scrimmaging three and four hours a day . . . George Kenneally of South Boston, captain of the Eagles last year, is assistant coach . . . "Eggs" Manske, freshman coach at Boston University last season, is one of the ends . . . the greatly publicized Alabama Pitts will also play for the Eagles.

ED DON GEORGE DAN O'MAHONEY

Victor greets Vanquished. Dan O'Mahoney shakes hands with Ed Don George after their title wrestlmg match at Fenway Park, which Danno won with his famous "Irish Whip." George doesn't seem very anxious to shake hands.

STARS AT RITES FOR TED COY

New York, Sept. 12—Members of Yale football teams who played with Ted Coy, All-American halfback in 1908 and 1909, attended funeral services held for him at Broadway Tabernacle church.

Coy died Sunday of pneumonia. He was 47.

The Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, president of Union Theological Seminary, conducted the services.

Honorary pall bearers were Walter S. Logan, Frederick J. Murphy, Stephen H. Phillips, Carroll T. Cooney, Hamlin P. Andrus, Walter Brown, Robert French, Allen Corey, Stanhope Floyd-Jones, John H. Mallory, J. Morgan O'Brien and Charles Pascal Fragoso.

AUSTEN LAKE

Danno Does It And Wins Jewelled Stomacher

LAST NIGHT BY THE PALE moonlight Dan O-my-honey stormed the heights of glory, scaled the ramparts of fame and seized the bulwarks of bliss. Which is a way of saying that he won. And Ed Don George fell off the precipice of gloom and swallowed a couple of quarts of hemlock. Which means that he lost.

Austen Lake

Immediately after, while Papa Bowser and his intimate wrestling family stood by beaming, the young bridegroom's washboard stomach was fitted with the diamond girdle as wrestling's highest titular trinket.

The boys had been swimming a dead heat almost two hours out of port when George did a porpoise leap into the ring network that almost spilled his brains into Strangler Lewis' lap.

By good luck his brains missed the nickeled ringpost, but he hung there in the screw bonds and webbing, accounting of his muscles and licking down stripe of flesh.

And when he came unstuck he went on a groggy gallop until Danno grabbed his nose ring and bulldogged him down like a rodeo calf. The little dog laughed to see such fun, and the dish ran away with the spoon.

Homecoming Feast!

BRIDGEWATER IS TYPICAL of the best in rural Massachusetts, a placid town with an air of old needlepoint and the homey aroma of fresh gingerbread.

Its life flows in a never-ending cycle of calm. Babies are born, grow up, get married and have new babies which frisk in its hollyhock yards. Elms bend down a perpetual benediction.

Which is perilage to dress the naked information that Bridgewater is feasting its favorite son next Tuesday at sundown. Ma-

ALLISON ENDS PERRY'S COURT REIGN

SARAH

DEFEATED BY HELEN JACOBS IN FINAL

By Associated Press Sports Writer

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 12—Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and Sidney Wood, Jr., of New York will meet for the United States singles tennis championship today in a best of five sets match.

Taking their national rankings into consideration that's just as it should be. Allison tops the nation's "first ten" while Wood is only a notch below.

Allison created a staggering upset Yesterday when he scored a thrilling straight set victory over defending champion Fred Perry of England.

In that match it was Allison who was the world's foremost amateur. Perry has carried that designation for the past couple of years because of his all-conquering exploits at home and abroad, but against Allison he was just another player.

With that match under his belt there appears to be no stopping Allison. Perry, indeed, suffered a painful injury to his right kidney in the first set. But, that notwithstanding, he was due for a lucking as he said so himself after the match.

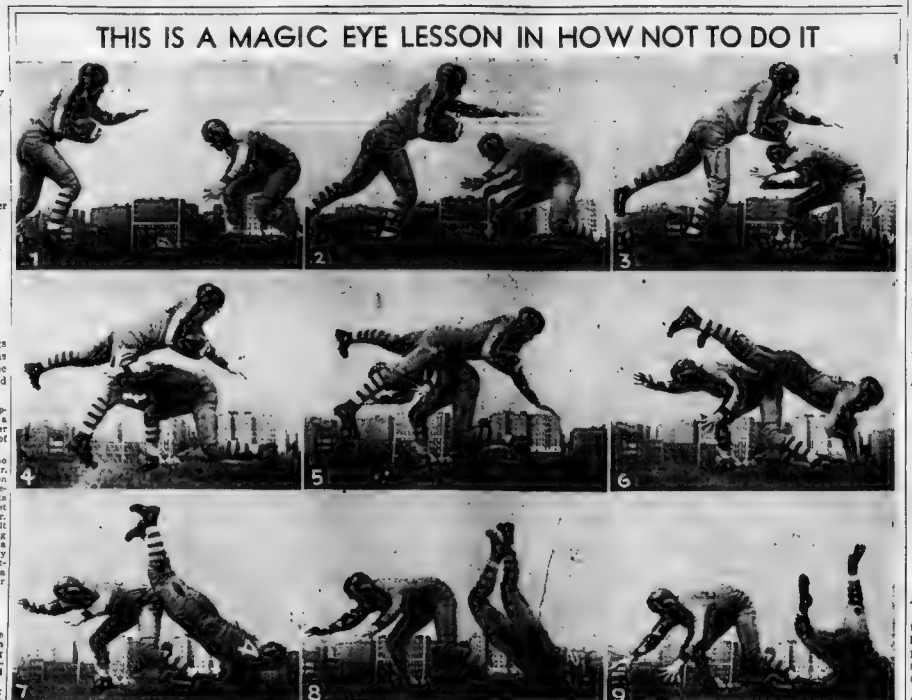
Jacobs Wins

Right now Allison is playing the finest tennis of his career. With each match he has been getting stronger. It's quite possible, however, that against Perry he reached his peak for the year.

On the strength of his showing in winning from Bitsy Grant in the other semi-final it appears doubtful if Wood can stand Allison's present fast pace. But the blond New Yorker can be counted on to put up a battle.

With the completion of the Wood-Allison match the United States Lawn Tennis Association's first combined men's and women's singles championships will come to an end. The women's tournament ended yesterday the same way it has for the past four years with Helen Hull Jacobs of Berkeley, Calif., winning again. She beat her victim of the final a year ago, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan of Brookline, Mass., in straight sets.

THIS IS A MAGIC EYE LESSON IN HOW NOT TO DO IT



(Pictures from International News Photograph Service)

The tackle that failed glimpsed by the magic eye camera. Such are the rules of football that the ball carrier may not hurdle the line or the tackler feet first, although certainforms of diving are sanctioned in the manner of gaining yardage. In this magic eye strip Oscar Bonom, a Columbia back, is caught taking the air as Ed Stanczyk tries to make a shoestring tackle. The first three pictures on top show the takeoff, the middle three show the flight and the bottom three the landing with the halfback flying along for a gain of five yards.

Champion Bob Olin to Box Here on Charity Card

By Sam Cohen

Bob Olin, world light-heavyweight champion, will meet the winner of the Al McCoy-Lou Brouillard bout, scheduled for the Boston Garden, Friday evening, September 20, for a charity show in December.

Rip Valenti, matchmaker for the Goodwin A. C., which is staging the Brouillard-McCoy grudge classic, made a hurried trip to New York and reached a verbal agreement with Olin to meet the winner of the Garden struggle.

Valenti revealed that he had made a second offer to Olin for this match. He expects to go back to New York within a couple of days with a contract to be signed by the champion.

The Goodwin A. C. matchmaker's offer to Olin was admitted by the champion to be far beyond any offer he had received to defend his championship since he won it from Maxie Rosenbloom.

Meanwhile Brouillard and McCoy have started serious training for their match, outstanding ring attraction arranged in many years.

McCoy plans to begin boxing tomorrow at his new headquarters, Kelley and Haves' gymnasium. He is in good condition now after having boxed in five successive shows at Montreal.

In his last bout in Canada, McCoy gave Joe Knight of Miami, Fla., a pasting in a 15-round bout which the Montreal commission recognized as for the championship of the world.

Brouillard also is in excellent shape. He was kept busy on the coast recently where he finished a whirlwind campaign by defeating Young Corbett, former middleweight champion of the world. Brouillard is training at Buckley's gymnasium on Friend street.

CROSSLEY Team Leads

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept 12 (AP)—After 25 hours of riding, the Canadian-American team of Jules Audy and Al Crossley, Jr., and the Swedish-German team of Erland Christensen and Gustav Kilianer were tied for the lead in the annual six-day bicycle race at the Minneapolis auditorium tonight.

The two teams had traveled 613 miles and five laps, mut the Audy-Crossley combination had 630 points to its co-leaders' 615

INJURY Fails to Keep HORN DOWN

Three weeks ago today there was carried into a Lewiston, Pa., hospital the limp form of a chap whose face was smeared with grease and wearing oil-soaked jumpers.

Doctors, following a hurried examination, believed it would be many moons before he would leave the hospital—at least under his own power.

Today, Theodore (Teddy to you), Horn, walked into the automobile racing headquarters at Brockton Fair Grounds and applied for an entry blank.

Against the advice of physicians, Horn could not resist the smell of gasoline fumes and the roaring of motors. The temptation of once again being behind the wheel of his Miller Special was too great.

Forgetting about his triple crash at the Pennsylvania track he set out to take back to California the New England dirt track championships.

So followers of the "Sport of Sports," who visit the Brockton Fair grounds tomorrow or Saturday afternoon, will witness one of the gamest pilots that ever sat behind a wheel.

Horn will drive a Bax car. The same car that hurled Johnny Hannon to his death during the Indianapolis speed trials last May.

The program is being conducted under the sanction of the American Automobile Association. Tad Stuart, veteran A. A. A. official will act as the starter.

Chicago, Sept. 12—Representatives of four National League and two American League clubs have been summoned by Commissioner Landis to talk over world series plans here next Tuesday.

Wrestling Results

Los Angeles—Ulmeny Lorde, 215, Mexico City, tossed Ernie Dupre, 230, Syracuse, N.Y., 31:10 (Dupre unable to continue).

DANNO Strongest in IRELAND

By Paul Whelton

From Wicklow—on the east—to Tralee—on the west—the sun was shining through the mist today, an hour high in the heavens, as Dan O'Mahoney, lips puffed and dirt crusted, shuffled across the dark reaches of Fenway Park, the center of a milling, excited crowd.

It was after midnight in Boston, but six hours spaded the difference between Danno and the quiet places in Ireland to which he had been used before he was suddenly bootjacked into fame a short eight months ago.

Even as he shuffled, the tar-barrel fires might have been feeling the torch at Ballydehob and the home-town rooters might already have been regaling the tasks of the day in the enthusiasm of a celebration over Danno's 10lst victory.

Danno probably was not thinking of the home scenes as he shuffled his way toward the catacombs beneath the baseball stands, toward the dressing room and his shower.

But above him, still watching from Section D, John Gurry, the 84-year-old Cambridge horseshoer, was surrendering to Danno a family palm that has always been green in Gurry's memory.

Not John Gurry's grandfather, nor John Gurry's father—but Danno, after all—the retired horseshoer declared, is the strongest man ever to be born in Ireland.

It's been many a night since John Gurry stayed up after midnight, but he sat through it all at Fenway Park.

Once during the bout, the horseshoer declared, Danno used the new hold, which his camp renamed the Irish Jiu Jitsu, and when George, grasped by an arm and neck hold—and then suddenly tripped—crashed on his back, the old man stood up and yelled.

When it was all over and Danno was victorious once more, John Gurry was elated.

"Danno," he said, "will never be beat. He is, I think, even stronger than my old father—and I think, too, that he is even stronger than my grandfather, the two strongest men ever to be born in Ireland, and only horseforce but at any time."

John Gerry's father before him, he said, was also a horseshoer, and so strong was he, that when he was shoeing a bad horse and the steed became balky, the elder Gurry would merely flip the horse over on his back and shoe him from that position.

Even stronger was the third back in the line of John Gurrys, however—the Gurry grandfather.

"With one hand," said the present John Gurry, "my grandfather would reach down, grab himself with one hand by the bare heel—and lift himself clear off the floor.

"But Danno—I think the boy is the best of the lot."

George Sticks With Danno More Than Two Hours

An arm lock and body scissors then sent George to the mat. Danno applied tremendous pressure in an effort to wear the challenger down.

George surprised O'Mahoney by applying a Japanese leg hold. He sent the young Irishman sprawling to the canvas.

Danno stepped in quickly, and nailed George with a toe hold. George got clear only to be dropped by a body hold. The rivals spent considerable time on the canvas in close-up warfare.

Just before the hour mark Don and Danno regained their feet. Following an exchange of blows, George dropped O'Mahoney to the mat with an old fashioned rabbit blow.

Danno came up off the mat quickly and electrified the big crowd when he applied an "Irish Whip" and sent George skrocketing over his shoulder. As Danno pounced for the kill, Don wiggled under the ropes.

The big fellows were whirling along at a terrific clip as they passed the hour mark.

At the 1h. 15m. mark O'Mahoney O'Mahoney clamped on a toe hold. He moved quickly into a body press George got out of danger by crawling under the ropes.

GIANT SWING

George failed in an attempt to score with an inside crotch hold. Danno pulled Don to the canvas. George scored with an arm lock.

O'Mahoney locked George's left arm between his legs and then applied the pressure. Danno turned George from side to side, and submitted him to great punishment.

Danno tried to count with an "Irish Whip," but was tripped by George.

Danno used a body hold to crash George into a neutral corner. Don was tired and was slow regaining his feet.

Then came the finish described above.

LEWIS WINS

Strangler Lewis, former world's champion, won from Dick Daviscourt of California in 8 minutes and 15 seconds with a headlock. Lewis displayed much of his old-time dash and power.

Count Zaryoff of Grafton and Chief Little Moose of Oklahoma also engaged in a 15m. draw.

Baer Hot Over 'Sneak' Charges

Speculator, N. Y., Sept. 12 (INS)—Max Baer was in a high state of haughtiness today over the charge that he had "copped a sneak" by having private pictures taken of Joe Louis in training at Pompton Lakes.

The yarn ran in and out of the Bombers' camp to the effect that moving picture men, in their regular line of duty, had taken an extra reel and had carted it up here for Max's personal use.

"I don't have to go peeking through knotholes in Joe's fences," Baer said, "to learn anything about him. I have no movies of him going through his present workouts. The pictures that they are taking about were the ones taken when Joe fought Carnera.

"I have a perfect right to study them. That is perfectly legitimate, and there is nothing to prevent his getting and viewing my scrapbook of Carnera. I suppose he has been looking at plenty of them."

Max wants to bet $20,000 on himself. He invites the wise men of Broadway to lay it on the line.

Derringer's 18th

Cincinnati, Sept. 12 (US)—Sixteen safe blows behind Paul Derringer's steady hurling gave the Reds a 7 to 4 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Derringer hung up his 18th victory of the season, holding the Dodgers to 10 hits.

Kiki Cuyler hit a home run with one on in the fourth for the winners, while Babe Herman chipped in with four hits out of five against his former mates.

"LEFTY" GROVE HAS ONLY one expensive taste. He loves big, shiny and expensive motor cars. And yesterday Lefty bought a big sedan of high-priced make, aglitter with silver gibiets and rich with upholstery.

A few years ago when I traveled up the funicular railroad to Lefty's mountain home at Lonsconing, Md., his two big motors were the rustic town's prise exhibit. Where the other natives rode in rheumatic gas buggies or tongue-clucked behind hill mules, Lefty rode in rolling palaces.

The roads were rutty. The houses leaned crazily against the hillside. Homespun people in jumpers and sunbonnets oozed through the drowsy village as though inching against eternity.

On the outskirts, before Lefty's simple frame home, stood a De Luxe Pierce and a master Cadillac, motorized jewelry that were the only modern note in a primitive scene.

Forked Roads From Ireland

THE CAREER OF JACK DOYLE, Irish fistic orchid who came here as a certified fighter, and that of Dan O'Mahoney, the County Cork lad, who arrived as an indentured wrestling apprentice, offers a queer contrast in opposite fortunes.

O'Mahoney, with a faint reputation, rode on to a fairy tale life of position and riches, while Doyle has earned little more than ridicule, a growing deficit and a Hollywood wife.

O'Mahoney came with nothing but his biscuit muscles to gain a championship.

Doyle came with a championship and became a picturesque flop, suspended by suspicious boxing commissions and denied the right to show his fistic arts in Boston.

THE GERMAN MARK, which in normal times cashed four to the American dollar, now stands 40.33 cents each, or somewhat less than double the standard value. Thus the latest German press bulletin, which lists admission prices to the Olympic games, shows the price of seeing the features will be expensive to American visitors.

Cost of attending every event between August 1 and 16 next year totals 137 marks, or $54 for the best seat. Yet by no flight of fancy can the revenue come within gunshot of making the games self-supporting, as was the case at Los Angeles, where more than a million in profits were distributed among bond holders.

The German state has spared no expense in raising an arena, which surpasses the Yale Bowl in appearance and facilities.

There are separate swimming, hockey, boxing and gymnastic stadia of permanent construction, and a large village done in tile and stucco to house the athletes of all nations and both sexes. The whole has cost $16,000,000 and stands as the pre-eminent athletic plant of all time.

Trouble in Arcadia

JOE LOUIS' SPARRING partners, hapless Blacks who suffer daily thumpings during his training chores, are grumbling about the meagerness of their pay.

One who resigned his unenviable job lately says that Julian Black, Louis' business manager, pays $15 a day for three rounds. But, if any human punching bag is K. O.'d in the first round, which frequently happens, his pay is cut to $5. And if Louis works only one day in the week, the dark targets get only their board, which is plain diet, and an outhouse hall room.

The sparring helpers say that since Louis is assured $100,000 as the lowest estimate of his end in the Baer bout, he should be willing to pay his punishment partners the standard $25 a day, which is the scale in top flight pugilism.

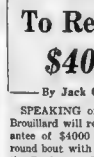
Lou To Receive $4000

By Jack Conway

SPEAKING of news: Lou Brouillard will receive a guarantee of $4000 for his ten-round bout with Al McCoy at the Garden on September 20. McCoy will pull down 15 per cent of the receipts.



The tussle will have to draw $10,000 to enable the Goodwin A. C. to keep out of the red. "Rip" Valenti is hoping for a gate of between $12,000 and $15,000.

• • •

Brouillard has won all of his bouts since going under the management of Johnny Buckley. Lou, at 160 pounds, will be spotting McCoy from eight to ten pounds in weight, but believed his aggressiveness and punch will enable him to batter his way to a victory.

Mr. Boston

• • •

Jack Sharkey has been one of McCoy's rooters. This has been due to the fact Al is managed by Barney Fox, who used to help condition Sharkey for his bouts. With Johnny Buckley, his manager, piloting Brouillard Sharkey is very much in the middle.

• • •

Mike Jacobs of the Twentieth Century Club tells me he has banked $258,000 of the advance sale of the Louis-Baer bout which will be staged in the Yankee Stadium, New York on September 24. Boston alone has bought $5000 worth of tickets.

• • •

The Sharkey-Maloney bout in New York, which drew $232,000, had a ticket sale of $80,000 in this city. That is more money than a ring tussle ever drew here.

The Sharkey-Maloney tussle at Braves Field for the Cronin-Pinhon Post with Alex MacLean matchmaker, drew $56,000. This is the all time high for a fistic attraction in Massachusetts.

ROCKINGHAM

ROCKINGHAM PARK opens again next Monday. Lou Smith informs me it's the best racing stables in the country, as in the past, will race their horses on the Salem, N. H., strip.

• • •

Rockingham Park was New England's first flattrack. It has been the most profitable, due to the small amount of money invested.

Smith and his associates purchased Rockingham Park in the days following Pickering racing for $80,000. They later invested $100,000 for stables and other improvements.

This compares with a cost of $1,750,000 for Narragansett Park, $2,500,000 for Suffolk Downs and $1,250,000 for Agawam.

• • •

Smith still insists it will be necessary for the owners of New England tracks to curtail the number of racing dates if they are to avoid killing the goose that is laying the golden eggs.

• • •

Agawam, says Smith, will be ready at least a week before the opening, on October 1.

• • •

Suffolk Downs will get going on October 2. It is not believed that the conflict between Agawam and Suffolk will injure either track on account of the distance between them.

• • •

SOX SUCCESS

EDDIE Collins was right when he said the Red Sox would make money in the face of legalized racing. The Yawkey team had not either successful season. Good baseball attracts the public even in a race mad community.

• • •

Boxing was supposed to be dead when Joe Louis came thundering along, knocking his opponents for a loop. The Louis-Carnera bout outdrew the championship tussle between Braddock and Baer.

The Louis-Baer go will set the highest box office figures since Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling drew a bit under $800,000 in their first contest for the Milk Fund in June, 1930. Eight months after the stock market crash of 1929.

• • •

The high for gate receipts for a non-title bout was set by Jack Dempsey and Jack Sharkey in 1927 when they drew $1,083,000. I look for Louis and Baer to draw close to $800,000.

• • •

BRADDOCK

JIMMY Braddock is secretly rooting for Joe Louis to knock out Baer, even though he is picking Max to win. The Irishman told me he believes the "Brown Bomber" and himself will draw a million dollar gate next June. He is getting a 45 per cent cut of the receipts under his contract with the New York Gardens.

Braddock's end of a purse of $450,000 would keep him off welfare rolls. If he is at wiss in money matters as he now seems.

BOSTON Golfer Blows BIG LEAD

LYNCH 1 UP OVER TRANSUE

The Country Club, Cleveland, Sept. 12 (AP) —Coming bac in another uphill fight, Champion W. Lawson Little, Jr., made up a two-hole deficit to reach the turn all square today with Warrington (Duff) McCullough, Jr., of Philadelphia, in the fifth round of the United States amateur golf championship tournament.

Little took the eighth and ninth holes to draw level. Both were out in 37, one over par.

Continuing his sensational pace, Oklahoma's sharp-shooting contender, Walter Emery, fired the outgoing nine holes in 32, four under par to become seven up on Eddie Held, Jamesburg, N. J.

Emery, former holder of the national intercollegiate championship and now studying law at the University of Oklahoma, fired a distinct challenge to Champion W. Lawson Little, Jr., or any other rival as he kept up his blazing work. The Oklahoman was four under par yesterday in his fourth round match against Pat Sawyer, Minneapolis, after upsetting Ross Somerville, the Canadian champion.

Emery kept up his dazzling pace, got his fourth birdie on the 520-yard eighth, where he chipped close for a four after two fine wood shots.

He had Held on the ropes and was seven up as he reached the turn in 32, four under par.

Emery—Out	4	4	3	5	4	4	4	5	—32
Held—Out	5	5	4	6	4	5	4	5	4—39

Under a hot sun, Emery shot birdies on the second, third, fifth and eighth holes against Held. He was deadly with his approach shots, missing an eagle two on the thir by inches. His outgoing 32 was the lowest nine holes so far in the tournament.

Champ One Down

Meanwhile, Little, playing Warrington B. McCullough, Jr., Philadelphia, in the fifth round, was one down after five holes. The champion's control was not up to his usual standard at the outset and his temper seemed to onlookers to be on edge as he sought his 28th consecutive victory in national amateur title play.

Jack Munger, Dallas star and last of the Texans, set the pace for the upper half in company with long-hitting Harry Givan, Seattle Munger took the first hole with a five to Givan's six, the latter hooking to the trees and taking three more to reach the green. Givan was home on the long second with two wood shots, however, and his birdie four evened it up. They halved the next in par fours.

Lynch in Lead

Joe Lynch of Boston, captain of this year's Georgetown University team, took three straight holes from Cleveland's Oliver Transue. Lynch's par was good enough to win the first, as Transue overplayed his approach. He dropped a 30-foot putt on the second and pitched "dead" on No. 3 for birdies.

Lynch, after sinking a 40-foot putt to become four up, went into a tail spin. The Georgetown star dropped three of the next five holes [redacted] was only up one at the turn against Transe.

Transue out	5	5	4	3	4	4	5	5	—37
Lynch out	4	4	3	4	4	5	6	5	—36

Munger, after halving the fourth and fifth in par, found a five good enough to take the sixth and go one up. Givan was stymied on the sixth and lost a chance to win that hole.

Johnny Goodman, Omaha, halved the first three holes with Eddie Meister, the Cleveland city champion in par figures. Goodman stymied his rival on the first hole, after Meister dropped an approach two feeks from the cup. The Nebraskan was stymied on the next hole and Meister saved a half on numbers three with a fine recovery from deep rough to the green.

Charley Kocsis, University of Michigan star, was two up on Tommy Goodwin, New York, as he took the second and third, 2&e was one under par.

George Voight, in an all-New York tussle with Willie Turness, sank an eight-footer for a birdie four on the second hole but Turness squared the count by sinking a 20-footer for a birdie on the third hole.

Followed by a gallery of nearly 1000 fans, Little halved the first two holes with McCullough, but lost the third to the Philadelphian's birdie three to be one down. The Champion Little barely missed a 25-footer for a birdie on the first. He was bunkered by his second shot, but recovered for a par five on the next.

BROWNS HERE FOR FIVE GAMES

TEAM TO WATCH IN '36

By Joe Cashman

Rogers Hornsby's surprising St. Louis Browns, with such Boston favorites as "Moose" Salters, Lyn Lary, Ivy Paul Andrews and Jack Burns, invade the Red Sox ballwick this p. m. for five games in four days, including a Ladies' Day doubleheader tomorrow, Friday, the 13th.

Apparently doomed to finish deep in the cellar less than a month ago, the Mound City outfit is now in seventh place and less than two games back of sixth. It accomplished its remarkable climb by playing the best ball in the circuit for the past four weeks.

If the Cronimmen are to stay in the fight for third place, they must halt the visitors' surge. And to turn that trick, they must do something they couldn't do when the St. Louis entry was sunk in the mire and playing the worst ball in the loop.

In other words, the Browns share with the Tigers and Indians the distinction of being the only clubs that hold an edge over the Sox for the season.

SPARKS FLY

The Hornsby henchmen have dropped only one out of five series with the natives and arrive here today with a 10-7 edge in victories. They walked off with a 21-hit advantage in two previous engagements at the Fens and, after splitting two games and then dropping two out of three in St. Louis, they took four out of six when the Sox last crossed the Mississippi.

The last meeting of the rivals out West will long be remembered by each.

The Sox lost the grip they had just gained on third place in Chicago and are still trying to regain it, while the Browns, about ready to throw in the sponge, got a new lease of life and have been sweeping through all opposition with the speed and destructiveness of a prairie fire ever since.

Moreover, there was plenty of rough play on both sides before the series was over.

Billy Werber was the central figure in two near riots and suffered a foot injury which kept him out of action 10 days and has him on the shelf again now.

Washington will may be able to play a game or two of this engagement. If he is, there's a possibility of more action on the Fenway infield than Danno and Don provided last evening.

Young Jack Wilson is the Sox mound choice for the opener. The Coast kid made his first start on the last visit to St. Louis and was knocked out in the first inning. He's pitched brilliant ball and has been undefeated since.

He'll need to be at his best to hold the visitors in check. Mr. Hornsby, after selling enough stars to insure the club having a successful financial season, has the survivors clicking on all cylinders.

He has four fence-busting outfielders in Solters, West, Coleman and Pepper; a great defensive infield composed of Burns, Carey, Clift and Lary; one of the ablest all-around catchers in the wheel in Hemsley, and he's finally developed Andrews, Knott, Cain and Walkup into consistent winning flingers.

If the Rajah isn't forced to make more trades, he'll have a club to watch next season.

The Sox had hoped to be in third place entering this series, but, after taking three in a row from the White Sox, they dropped the final tilt, 10-2, and fell 1½ games back of their goal when the Indians put over five runs in the ninth to nose out the Yankees.

Red Sam Jones, 42-year-old veteran of more than 20 big league campaigns, held the natives in check while his Pale Hose mates were fattening their batting averages at the expense of "Dusty" Rhodes, "Stew" Bowers and Walter Ripley.

Corcoran Warns B. C.

HILLTOPPERS EXPECT WIN SEPT. 28 | CLEO BOASTS FINE GRID TEAM

By Walter Kiley

Bunny Corcoran comes back to his native heath from the fastnesses of Manchester, N. H., to warn Boston College of the danger of underestimating St. Anselm's, Sept. 28th opponent.

Corcoran, former side-de-camp at Holy Cross, has cast his fate again with Cleo O'Donnell, his former overlord at Mt. St. James . . . and he claims, without intending to break faith with his new allegiance, that the Hilltoppers confidently expect to beat the Eaglets in their opener.

Reports trickling out of the Granite State verify Bunny's guarded statements . . . Andy Dominick and Pat Avery, a pair of husky veterans of the Boston brigade, wear broad smiles as they vision the game . . . the pair formerly prided their loins on the Saints' gridiron . . . and spent the past summer with many of Cleo's foremost disciples . . . so that the game to them bears much more significance than an opener . . . it is a major objective.

Captain O'Brien May Not Make Team

The return of Captain "Red" O'Brien to University Heights and his first appearance in a uniform completes the squad . . . Dinny Mac" had intended to convert the Eagles' leader back to his former guard position . . . but with William Conway, end coach, failing to enthuse over the offensive work of his wing candidates, all continue to use him as an end.

O'Brien's finger, badly damaged in an automobile smash-up, has come along far better than doctors considered possible . . . still bandaged, he can bend it at the joints . . . so that he should be ready to jump into play within another day or two . . . and thereby relieve an embarrassing situation wherein a new captainey election was considered a near future necessity.

The red-thatched Hyde Park leader will have a job on his hands making certain of a first team position . . . with Ed Furbush, Bob Cash, John Kozlowski, Jim Cahill and John Morris having a jump on him at the moment . . . But O'Brien displayed remarkable speed in beating his rivals in a sprint race for ends held by "Dinny Mac" and may team with Furbush as starter against St. Anselm's.

Lateral passing is due for a mighty splurge at the Heights, the linemen getting particular enjoyment and thrill out of its possibilities

Galligan Greatly Improved

The Heightsmen are rapidly becoming adept at its usage . . . few are the plays on which it isn't attempted . . . and particularly strange is it to see a big burly guard or tackle taking the flip and turning from interference or blocker into a ball carrier.

Therein lies one of its greatest advantages . . . Linemen, under the old order, were born to blush unseen . . . playing a great, but inconspicuous, part in the success of the play . . . With the wide spread of the lateral, forwards get their turn to hug the spotlight and that they are basking in their opportunities is evidenced by the manner in which flowers like Dominick, Ted Galligan, Pat Pasquale, Cecco Gilman, Neal Owens and other guards and tackles are picking themselves off the ground and rushing after the ball carrier as trailers

Speaking about Galligan brings to mind that he is one of the most improved players on McNamar 's squad . . . He reports back at 212 hard packed pounds . . . A victim of an infected leg which put him in the hospital for much of the 1934 season, he is going to be hard to beat out for a regular berth

"Honey" Ferdenzi may be small . . . but he is one of the fastest of the B. C. backs . . . twice he filled a regular sophomore back of promise, for speed honors . . . Vin Keough was by far the fastest of the centers over the 50-yard test . . . Dominick and Gilman, despite their size, led the tackles . . . O'Brien and Cash, the ends.

Mautner Crashes Crusader Lineup

The backfield as it now takes shape finds Tom Brennan at quarter, Ferdenzi and Tottolini the halfbacks and sophomore Bryan the full back or blocking back . . . Furbush and Cahill are being paired as ends, Galligan and Dominick as tackles, Owens and Pezenny as guards and Keough as center

Eddie Androne of Holy Cross is sticking close to veteran material for his first eleven, only one newcomer crashing into the charmed group . . . he is Bob Mautner, six foot two inch sophomore from Philly . . . Red Gold, Captain Joe Morris, Jim Mahon and Joe Yablonski comprise the backfield as now outlined . . . Bob Daughters and Bob Curley are the wings . . . Dave Gavin and Hips Moncewicz the tackles . . . Ken Lonsdale and Pete Limpus the guards

The incoming horde of husky sophomores and the balance of the junior and senior candidates will be thoroughly groomed for reserve strength.

COLLEGE Publicity SPREADS

By Damon Runyon
(Copyright, 1935, Universal Service)

New York, Sept. 12—This is the season of the year when the sport writer finds his mail weighty with important looking envelopes bearing the imprint of great institutions of learning. Some of these envelopes are fatter than rejected manuscripts.

The sport writer doesn't have to open the envelopes to realize that the football season is about to buse right in his molars.

He knows, intuitively, that the envelopes contain the thoughts, supported by statistics, of the young gentlemen who devote themselves to publicizing the athletic departments of the institutions of learning aforsaid

It has become quite an industry, this publication

We suspect that it may be that the college professors are talking about when they mumble of the over-emphasis of football

Not all the institutions of learning maintain regular mimeographs, of course, though the custom seems to be spreading

We have never yet received any carbon copy from Yale, or Harvard, or Princeton.

NEEDS IT

Football used to be considered a personal and private matter at Harvard and Yale, and Princeton. They even kept it secret from the spectators for a long time by refusing to put numbers on the players

Of course there 's no great hazard attached to getting football news from Harvard, or Yale, or Princeton today, because in the natural evolution of humanity, the coaches have become refined in their attitude toward sport writers

But the news isn't encouraged to the extent of the publicity departments maintained at other colleges

After all the football business is looking for paying customers nowadays, to help support the game, and the expensive stadiums connected with the game

Football has to have newspaper publicity to live

Like baseball, football sells newspapers, of course, but not enough to stand off the publishers' cost of covering the game

Football and baseball are both pretty lucky when you come to think of it

ANOTHER PASS FOR BABE

Picture from International News Photograph Service

It does seem a bit ironic that the National League should come forward to honor Babe Ruth with a lifetime pass when it was the American League that he benefited. Babe is shown with the pass, presented him by Ford C. Frick, president of the league.

Providence Joins 'Special' Throng

When M. J. Logan of Providence insisted that the Boston Evening American's Fight Special add a car or two for its Providence readers—he started something!

The New Haven lines, which have the arrangement of the schedule, inquired:

"How can we be sure anybody will go from Providence on a Boston special?"

Logan promptly answered by sending an order for block tickets—and as many cars as are needed from Providence will be set out in the Rhode Island capital from the Boston Evening American Special.

Enthusiastic response from all parts of Greater Boston indicate that the special to the Baer-Louis fight at the Yankee Stadium, in New York, on September 24, will break all records for volume.

In order to obtain for Boston fight fans REAL seats—and combine them with a reduced railroad fare and a schedule which will allow business men to go with only a single afternoon away from work—the special train has been organized.

AHEARN FANS Await Start of Rockingham Fall Meet

By Bob Ahearn

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., Sept. 12—New Englanders will be returning to the scene of their first love next Monday, when picturesque Rockingham Park throws open its gates for a 12-day fall meeting.

It was at the local track that residents of the New England area were first initiated in the ways of parimutuel wagering

Before that one had to edge his way into a corner smoke shop to lay a wager on a horse but with the signing of the pari-mutuel bill in 1933 in the Granite state, the trek to Rockingham began

George D. Widener

Slowly but surely the mutuel windows began to rise, and indication that the peak of the betting craze has not been reached yet is the $368,567 handle at Narragansett last Labor Day.

Since the inaugural card of racing here at the "Rock" three years ago new tracks have sprung up, including beautiful Narragansett Park at Pawtucket, Rhode Island, Suffolk Downs outside of Boston Proper, and now still another, Agawam Park at Springfield.

SATION TO RUN

Where 60 days of racing was all the New England district enjoyed in 1934, this year six months of the sport of kings will have been supported in these parts with the grand finale at Narragansett, November 16.

With the nomination of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney's Black Buddy and George D. Widener's Sation for the running of the Mrs. A. J. Pierce Speed Handicap here September 18, racing fans can be assured of one of the classiest duels of the New England turf season.

Sation, one of the greatest sprinters of recent years, has been working in a manner at Walter O'Hara's "Gansett oval that leaves no doubt that he is in prime shape for the feature.

STICKNEY BACK

In a recent workout over a bad track, the son of Gainsian stepped three-quarters in 1:15 3-5. His fractions for this sensational trial were three eighths in :34 4-5, the half in :47 2-5, Sation was reined up at the end of three-quarters

Black Buddy, sporting the silks of the late Whitney stable, was a victor over the famed King Sazon earlier this season. If Widener's Sation is able to defeat Black Buddy, it will be only after a hard fought battle.

C. H. Stickney, steward at Narragansett and resident of Nashua, New Hampshire, will be back in the Pagoda here. Stickney served as the state representing the New Hampshire racing commission.

Will Have Easy Field to Beat

BEST BET—INFIDOX

Narragansett Park, Sept. 12—Infidox, Mrs. George Ogle's good juvenile, stands head and shoulders over an indifferent lot of youngsters opposing him in the six furlongs of the Tiverton Purse here tomorrow afternoon.

FIRST—CAERLEON, TAKUS, CANCEL

CAERLEON, coming up frean and good, shapes up as the class here. He stands right out in the light on general form. TAKUS figures to offer the contention. This plater is exceptionally fond of the strpi, as may be attested by his corking efforts of earlier in the meeting. CANCEL turned in a dull performance last trip

SECOND—SANDY BEACH, PATSY REGONE, OPERA BOUFFE

SANDY REACH is stepping up a few notches, but I just cnot go past her in searching for the winner. This filly stepped six panels in 1 1/2-5 to win as her rider pleased last time. PATSY REGONE was his last two starts impressively. She is strictly the one to fear. OPERA BOUFFE's most recent effort may be discarded. She disliked the slippery footing that day.

THIRD—SALUT D'AMOUR, TRISTRAP, BALANCER

SALUT D'AMOUR shapes up best here on general form. The Lou Williams-trained thoroughbred finished third to Tristrap last time. But in front of that the latter has won corking victories. TRISTRAP, a winner of two straight races, figures next best in my dope. BALANCER for the remainder

FOURTH—INFIDOX, QUICK LOOK, EPSOM PRINCE

INFIDOX, fourth in the Reaversail claiming stakes, needs only to repeat that performance in order to prove the winner's circle. QUICK LOOK is promising maiden from the Brookmeade stable. Has worked real fast for this and figures next best. EPSOM PRINCE has raced well over this strip and appears best of the others

FIFTH—SEAWICK, FABIUS, LONG BIT

SEAWICK turned in a bang-up third to Red Roamer last trip. The Ketchell colorbearer was all but left at the post that day. FABIUS, the main danger, turned in corking seconds in his last two outings. LONG BIT'S recent third was not at all bad considering that it was her first effort after a long lay-off. She may upset

SIXTH—HIGHEST POINT, SQUEEZE OUT, BARRY

HIGHEST POINT is accorded the top figures in this wide open affair. This plater raced at Saratoga where he turned in a corking third to Piety. SQUEEZE OUT is coming off sprint races and is dangerous. BARRY was a beaten favorite last trip. He can better that performance

SEVENTH—FOREIGN LADY, BALMACAN, GUNWALE

Anything can happen in this wide-open affair. FOREIGN LADY is my guess. This filly turned in a nice effort behind True Charm last trip. The dry strip will suit her nicely. BALMACAN and Tristrap, stuffered sharp interference that day, but that effort was in the mud. GUNWALE shapes up next best

EIGHTH—PROSECUTOR, TRUE CHARM, PAY BACK

PROSECUTOR, a corking winner at six furlongs, will be well suited by the route here. The Arvin colorbearer won at one mile and a furlong at Rockingham. He should make every minute a winning one. TRUE CHARM won her last start. PAY BACK is a long-shot possibility.

Johnston Has 4 Champs To Play With

Braven Dyer of the Los Angeles Times, who knows plenty of them says Lou Little of Columbia and Larry Snyder of Ohio State are "the two most gentlemanly and at the same time the most colorful coaches . . . Off with those Kellys, Jents.

The first to dub the Cardinals the Gas House Gang was George C. Carens of the Boston Transcript . . . Ford Frick says Sam Breadon & Co. owe a vote of thanks . . . Maybe he would prefer an annual pass.

Fifteen months ago Arch Ward of the Chicago Tribune advanced transportation from Detroit to Chicago so Joe Louis could compete with the Golden Glovers against Poland . . . Mr. Ward can take a bow as a long distance picker.

Give Helen Jacobs a hand . . . A week ago she called the well-known turn by predicting Sarah Palfrey Fabyan would march through Kay Stammers et al. and enter the Forest Hills finals.

Don't waste any sympathy for the chapper James Joy Johnston . . . He's got three champions—Canzoneri, Olin and Salica—ready to fight in a moment's notice . . . And a fourth—James J. Braddock—on deck for next summer . . . Pity Mr. Johnston? Sure, just like you would Babe Ruth, who has a $1000 (month) for life and is having a swell time playing golf

Forest Hills fans had Don Budge's ears burning with their boos when he started to leave the court with the first rain drops against Bitsy Grant in their day . . . Not that it matters, but Grant was leading two sets to none at the time

There is no living with Mr. Eddie Neil, the eminent fight expert, these days . . . Last week he had Cisto on two 28 to 1 shots at Narragansett...Both came through... But Mr. Neil forgot to bet on them . . . Is his face red? No, purple.

TODAY A YEAR AGO: Fred Perry won U. S. tennis title, beating Wilmer Allison in five sets.

THREE YEARS AGO: Johnny Fischer shot 69 at Baltimore to lead qualifying field for national amateur golf championship.

FIVE YEARS AGO: Johny Doeg beat Bill Tilden, 10—8, 6—3, 3—6, 13—15, 6—4, in semi-finals of U. S. amateur tennis, the first American to defeat Big Bill since 1919.

HUSKY Casualty Toll MOUNTS

One thing at least is settled for Coach Al McCoy of Northeastern—h. definitely knows what material he has to work with.

While the unexpected casualties number eight, the losses are spread through the outfit's eleven posts and can be filled by other good candidates from the squad of nearly 50

First Steve Mayberry of Beverly, four-sports star, announced his withdrawal from school, leaving McCoy without a veteran quarterback. Gus Rook, former freshman ace, will take his place.

Then Charlie Bergamini, captain-elect of the hockey sextet, and a tackle letterman last year, decided not to report in order to heal an injured shoulder in favor of hockey.

Besides these two regulars, Dick Opp, a huge freshman tackle and basketball pivot, definitely decided that he would not return to school.

Paul Azrillo, another freshman, flunked out. Buck Tracy of Revere and Tom Kenny, two other pup standouts, did not return this fall. And Ova Hinson of Maynard, another excellent prospect, is still not sure about returning to school.

Thus McCoy can no longer depend on those men and must plan accordingly. Because of the turn of a large number of last years' lettermen, however, McCoy can still build a team that may achieve the height of unbeaten eleven.

U. S. WOMEN Swamped, 20-1

Berkhamstead, Eng., Sept. 12 (AP)—The American women's lacrosse team suffered a crushing 20-1 defeat at the hands of the Boxmoor team today. Elizabeth Poulin of Philadelphia scored the lone American goal.

Evers Quits

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 12—Johnny Evers, pre-war Chicago Cubs and Boston Braves second baseman, has resigned his post as general manager of the Albany club of the International League.

King Saxon, Top Row in Same Classic

By The Associated Press

A field of at least ten distance runners will probably face the starter for the Aqueduct Handicap, a test of one and one-sixteenth miles which will feature the closing day's program at the Queens County course Saturday. C. H. Knoblekamp's King Saxon has been assigned the top weight of 128 pounds but the Kentucky sportsman has not decided whether he will send his ace to the post.

Listed among the probable starters are Top Row, conqueror of Discovery in the $25,000 Narragansett Special, Count Arthur, winner of the Saratoga cup, Vicarass and Good Gamble. If ten go, the race will be worth $5300 to the winner.

Johnny Gilbert, who has been making a name for himself as a great rider of two-year-olds, has deserted the New York tracks for Maryland, where he will ride Gold Foam, winner of the Travers for E. J. Benjamin's New Orleans-owned Starmount Stable, at Havre de Grace Saturday.

E. R. Bradley has about decided to send his good two-year-old, Blen Joh, runner-up to Red Rain in the Hopeful, to Havre de Grace for the renewal of the $10,000 Eastern Shore Stakes Saturday

HARRIER CARD At Northeastern

Langley Morang, newly-appointed North eastern University cross-country coach, today announced the following varsity harrier schedule:

Oct. 5. Connecticut State at home.

NEW ENGLAND

Recovery PACE IS Steady

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

New England continues to run at an even pace in the recovery handicap, judging by a breakdown of electric power production figures.

Weekly percentage changes for the major geographical districts reveal New England gains over corresponding 1934 periods at about the same rate as for the country as a whole. In the latest week reported, for example, a gain for this district of 12.3 per cent compares with one of 12 per cent for the United States. It is just one more tribute to the stability of New England and proves the assurance of recovery will march progress rather than by spurts.

Cotton manufacturers are emerging from the severe depression and unfavorable operating conditions of recent months. According to Dun & Bradstreet, prices are firmer, demand is increasing and operations are being stepped up slightly. Mills are beginning to book forward orders while reducing their stocks. Cotton yarns as yet have not firmed on the strong tone of finished cotton fabrics. The trade reporting service says it is generally conceded that the outlook is improving. Healthier conditions in the cotton textile centers will do much to further pro-perous conditions in New England.

Clippings: Southern Pacific seems determined to batter down the rate structure at 21 . . . On its last half a dozen moves in the past year 21 stopped them by pulling the axle . . . The drug stocks are pictured as having a hard time holding former relationships between profits and sales volume . . . It is simply a case of narrowing profit margins . . . Due to keener competition and increased expenses . . . We would be very much interested to know when we bought in this division . . . Price increases for 1930 yarns generated interest in our cotton-yarned Celanese . . . When 30 is touched we will feel better.

• • •

While the mid-week upturn in earlier ances was very welcome here, a strict interpretation of market action forbids our saying it was conclusive. Penetration of August highs in orderly fashion on heavy turnover would be the first indication that the limits we set early this week were not achieved. Until then we are not ready to expand positional rail shares. Followers of the 20 rail average should continue to look for 30 on either the rise or closing compilation. That will provide the real spark touching off new buying.

• • •

Sidelights: American Home Products mentioned here is not acting as well as we had hoped . . . Any drug stock available is worth while . . . A stop loss order at 28 is suggested . . . The preferred issues of American Power & Light are likely to be taken well on reactions . . . Quite a few analysts have become boosters of them as long term speculations . . . Electric Boat claims many long-time friends . . . The promised probe of the traction shares should prove interesting . . . For a long time now the group has moved too easily on unification rumors.

MADGE PREVENTS KATIE FROM PLAYING DETECTIVE

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 415

KATIE'S SUGGESTION that I take the boys upstairs to the nursery while she fixed the lunch for them, and followed after us with it, made me pause for a second's consideration.

I know her propensity for "snooping," as my mother-in-law terms my faithful maid's inquisitiveness, and I wondered if she might not have more knowledge than we wished of what was going on below stairs.

I knew that my father did not wish even such faithful servants —and friends—as Jim and Ina are to have any part, ten as onlookers, in his interrogation of the Chinese miscreants. That he might go "beyond the law" or "above" it in the ordeal to which he meant to subject the "hatchet men," I knew. I knew, equally well, that he would involve no person in a subordinate position in the undertaking.

Jim was in attendance upon Lee Chow. Indeed, I knew that he was under strict orders to stay there.

But Katie, if I left her, would be free to go out into the corridor —unless—I wheeled and spoke sharply.

"Katie, there is a very urgent reason why I do not wish you to leave the kitchen until I come back for you. Lock all your doors, and do not open them until I call. But hurry with that lunch. I'll be right back. Come, boys."

There was excitement and fright in the wail she sent after me.

"Oh! Mimsis Graham, vot happen? Is dere bandits and kidnapers und racketeers und—"

I had reached the door before she had exhausted the thesaurus, and I sent back a peremptory command.

THE BOYS KNOW!

"I'll tell you when I come back. Lock your doors and hurry."

I had a distinct sense of guilt, not only at frightening her without reason, but at the reaction of the small boys. They tried very hard to be nonchalant and for a moment as they swaggered on either side of me, I wondered if they had heard or understood what I had said. Then I noticed that they were walking very close to me, and presently Junior said with a gulp:

"Don't you be afraid, mums. We'll take care of you, won't we Rod? We won't let anybody get you, will we Rod?"

"No, you bet your bonts, we won't, Auntie Madge," Roderick assured me bravely.

Hurry. I admonished them, and taking a hand of each, rushed them up the stairs as I talked.

There isn't any great danger for all of us. I just wanted to be sure Katie wouldn't go away from the kitchen while I was up here."

"Oh! that's it!" Junior's voice was filled with a sapience amazing to me. "Gee, that's a good thing. Otherwise she'd be liable to be sneaking down to the basement to see what grandpa's going to do to those Chinese to make them talk."

"SNOOPER" KATIE.

"Yes, she's an awful snooper, Katie is," Roderick agreed, with such unconscious imitation of his grandmother that I almost choked with suppressed laughter, regardless of my astonishment and concern at the knowledge of what was going on which was proceeding from the mouths of my small son and his cousin.

I knew better than to express any amazement, or to ask any questions. They had spoken in the matter-of-fact tones as if they were discussing any matter of their ordinary routine. I hoped that they did not possess the knowledge which Junior's remark would indicate, and resolved to take no notice of it.

"Will you do something for me?" I asked as we paused outside the nursery door.

"Sure!" they chimed in unison.

"You know the three little monkeys on your father's desk, Junior?"

"The 'speak no, hear no, see no evil'?" he countered.

"Something like that." I smiled at him. "Now while you are in here, I want you to be as quiet as mice. Katie will bring your lunch into your room where you've been sleeping, and I want you to stay in there quietly until I call you. Word of honor, you won't go away?"

They flushed painfully at this reference—the first I had made—to their escapade, but their voices were sturdy.

"Word of honor, we won't go away, and we'll keep quiet."

"Remember that," I said, as I knocked lightly upon the nursery door, wondering what explanation I best would give my mother-in-law.

Back-to-School Styles

By ANNICE BRINK

SOME will go in cottons, some will go in wools—but whichever fabric is chosen to make its debut in the first days of the new school term, the frock itself must have its share of style! So we show both types, and either one would make the return to the school room that much happier. Left, a nicely tailored cotton (to be had in a tiny geometric figure as well as a stripe) gets itself into the goldstar class by coming equipped with a grand self-covered pencil box, shaped like a book, or mother's underarm bag. Such cachet! And both frock and bag cost only around two dollars. Pleated all around is the navy blue woolen skirt, at the left. And buttoned on to it is a blouse of imported gingham in a scarlet and green plaid. Under four dollars. For shopping details on either frock, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her.

CHAPTER 17

"Honey, you've got to help. If I were still only a newspaperman I would feel differently. Then it was my duty to print news, and preserve my confidences. Julie, I never broke a confidence in my life. I printed my story and told the world to go to hell when they wanted to know where I got my information. I never pumped you for secrets about Carston because I knew you, too, had to keep your confidences.

But can't you see, darling, that now I'm not talking as a newspaperman? I'm a sworn officer of the law, pledged to destroy by legal means such rats as Carston. Now I want all your confidence and in my new position I'm conscience-free in asking for it—in fact, I'm duty-bound to beseech your help—to demand it."

"Oh, Bill, I want to help, but I'm afraid—afraid for you and for me, too. I feel it is my duty to help put Carston where he belongs, but how about us? We'll be the ones to suffer if he finds us out, and he surely will."

"Oh no he won't, Julie—"

"Bill, give it up, please for me, dear. You've never formally proposed to me, but then, I've never formally refused to marry you. Take me away now and we'll forget your duty—we'll forget Carston and all this."

"Julie, you can't mean that. I could never look you in the face if I were to run out on my job like that. I'm going to nail Carston to the wall, dear. He'll be no sword of Damocles hanging over our heads much longer.

"I'm not simply a newspaperman now, darling I am a representative of the old boy with the white whiskers and the red, white and blue striped trousers who sits up in Washington. Darling, that's where my duty lies and so does yours. Will you help?"

"Bill, I want to help. You know, I'd do almost anything to put Carston where he belongs."

They sat silently looking at each other for a moment, and Bill reached across the table and grasped Julie's hand.

"How about it, girl?"

"All right, Bill, I'll help. Tell me what I'm to do."

"Fine, lovely, wonderful, Julie. I knew you were a soldier. Between us we'll do the nation a service that the entire police force of the city could never do. Between us we'll show Carston that Uncle Sam is a little bigger than Alexander Carston. I want Carston's books and the key to decode them, with. Now, here's the plan."

For several moments Bill spoke rapidly to Julie in whispered tones. Frequently she nodded her head to indicate that she understood. Then, as Bill finished his instructions, she rose and walked swiftly out past the bar.

A minute later Bill walked out, tossing a crumpled bill on the bar as he passed.

"What's eating that guy?" a lounger asked Tony as Bill departed. "Sore high hat, ain't he?"

"Naw," replied Tony. "He's a justa probable hadda fight wid hees a lady friend. Dey bean a talking lak hell in dere. Ain't nuting serious, though, I don' guessa."

Julie Gardner put out the lights in the little room she occupied in Alex Carston's hotel, and she went to bed. She didn't waft off to sleep, though she was weary.

The morning of her next awakening was to start a day fraught with fearsome possibilities. Her own life was to be hazarded against the power, the daring, the relentless cruelty of Carston, the man who had never spared anyone who attempted to cross him —and she, his only confidante, had sworn to Bill Bradford to turn him up, to surrender his secret record and the key whereby they might be decoded to the Federal government which was closing in on Carston to send him to Alcatraz as an income tax defaulter.

For a millionth of such a plan, Carston would have massacred his whole gang of killers and terrorists, perjurers, bribers and fixers.

And not only was her life so desperately at stake, but the life of Bradford, the reporter-special agent—assigned to get Carston at any cost, but to bring him in alive if possible and convict him—was as fully doomed if Carston's never-beaten hand retained an iota of its force or cunning.

That Bradford bore credentials of the nation's Department of the Treasury would mean nothing to Carston. Anything "besmirched" by the law he loathed with a hot hatred and a cold contempt. He had been a "cop-fighter" in his early, untrained hoodlum days; the hatred had been only deepened through his bloody ascension to silk-lined wealth and racketeering supremacy.

Yet, on the morrow, this slender, romantic young girl, who had realized the completest peril of her astounding dilemma, must steel herself and go through with this staggering business.

Carston, so far, had no intimation that Bradford was more than a newspaperman, affable and trustworthy beyond his duty to publish the news.

He knew that Julie and Bill were in love, and he would naturally be more immediately suspicious of them both at the first intimation of an overt act. He had them both "covered" by his spies and knew every time they met.

He rather liked them both—so far—for he would never have permitted this alarming relationship between them. But Carston, with all his hair-trigger distrust of everyone, had an inflated ego. He couldn't conceive it thinkable that Julie, whom he had honored with so much trust, could "go democratic."

Never Rake Up The Past

By RUBY AYRES

SOMEONE has written to ask me whether I think she should tell her fiance of an unhappy episode which happened many years ago when she imagined herself to be in love with another man.

Deceit is wrong, and more often than not when one tries to hide a thing, that thing refuses to be hidden, with the result that its importance is exaggerated, and the harm caused thereby is out of all proportion.

But there are occasions when to "confess" is merely to stir up endless distrust and bitterness. I do not believe in raking up the past unless it contains something so serious that it is bound to affect any future happiness. Small, human indiscretions are our own affair, and need not be laid bare to the eyes of a third party.

There are men who sincerely believe that they can forgive a mistake in a woman, but who will yet find it practically impossible to forget, with the result that consciously, or unconsciously, it influences their whole attitude and affection.

The good old world; it's a very sporting world on the whole, and although there are some Little Natures who will never allow the past to be forgotten, there are thousands who will generously wipe it out with a single gesture and never allow it to intrude again.

And so I would say to my correspondent—don't brood over the past or stir its dying ashes. The forgiveness which women extend to men is unending, so why men should be less magnanimous I fail to see.

If You're Moving

APARTMENT hunting is a late summer sport in which many women are now actively engaged, and moving day is not far away.

You can make this less of an ordeal if you plan your new home carefully before you actually change your living quarters, and work out some of your decorating problems in advance.

Helen Koues, director of Good Housekeeping Studio, gives these suggestions:

Get a floor plan of the apartment you have selected, then list your present furniture and sketch it on the plan the pieces you wish used in the exact positions you wish them to occupy. This will enable you to work out your color scheme, show you where the lamps should go and, if necessary, allow you to arrange for additional electric outlets before the painting and decorating begins.

Consider the color of your walls. These should harmonize with your furnishings. If a room is not bright and sunny, you can improve it by painting the walls and woodwork a bright shade.

Systematic Exclusion

In a notrump contract, the declarer can usually consider one of his two opponents the "danger hand."

This opponent he fears; the other does not bother him at all. The dangerous opponent is one who holds many established cards which will win tricks against the declarer; or perhaps the player who can make a lead which will trap a King or Queen between the jaws of a tenace.

The good player, early in the course of the play, decides which defender is in a position to make a dangerous lead.

Then, with the aid of all the "tricks of the trade," he seeks to keep that defender out of the lead. The peculiar type of playing which results in keeping a certain opponent from getting the lead is known as the "Avoidance Play."

A fortunate guess in the first trick gave South in the deal below the knowledge that an avoidance play was in order. Skillfully, he made the most of his knowledge.

South, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠AQ75 ♡K104 ♢J52 ♣543
♠1082 ♡A98 ♢AQ873 ♣109	North ♠ ♡ ♢ ♣ West East South	♠1043 ♡Q752 ♢104 ♣KJ7
	♠K6 ♡J83 ♢K96 ♣AQ862

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding was aggressive, but after South had made a minimum opening bid he still had to respond to North's one-over-one response, and when North raised him to two notrump, he gambled on one trick more for game.

West opened the seven of diamonds, and South, guessing that West had a monopoly on the high diamonds, put up dummy's Jack.

It held the trick, thereby convincing South that West had Ace-Queen, probably heading a five-card suit. If East got the lead to play a diamond through the King, it would be fatal.

To keep East from leading, South led a club, and ducked by playing the eight over East's seven. To play the Queen would be a losing play even if the finesse won, for East would then have taken the lead on the third round of clubs.

The eight of clubs West won. Had he continued diamonds he would have given South the ninth trick. So West, hoping to get East in, underled his Ace, playing the six of hearts.

Here again South had to be careful, and he was. Whether or not West had the Queen of hearts he did not care; he knew that if East had the heart Ace, the diamonds would immediately wreck him. So he played the King of hearts, and was delighted to see it win the trick.

The club finesse was still necessary, but a low club lead from dummy and the finesse of the Queen by South cleared four tricks in that suit. The spade suit accounted for three more, and since two had been won earlier the game was made.

COOKING

Put Snap Into Fish Dishes

By MARTHA LEE

ANY successful meal must be gaily colorful as well as flavorful.

In the menu that includes fish, attractive garnishes and flavor are doubly important, and both may be achieved by including a generous amount of crisp, tempting pickles.

Pickles are the natural accompaniment to fish, especially the fresh tasting, sliced cucumber pickles like those our grandmothers made in old-fashioned kitchens and which we can either make or buy ready to use.

Stuffing for baked fish, fish loaves, fish salads, fish sandwiches and creamed fish dishes are all enhanced by using pickles either in the dish itself, or as a garnish. The suggestions below will be helpful in putting variety and snap into fish menus.

CRAB MEAT AU GRATIN

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon flour
1 16-oz. can Cream of Mushroom Soup
1 6½-oz. can crabmeat
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
½ cup grated American cheese
½ cup grated American cheese
Melt the butter in a saucepan, add flour and blend well. Pour in the soup and stir over slow heat until thickened. Strip bones from crabmeat, then flake fish and add to soup mixture, together with bread crumbs, salt, pepper and the ½ cup grated cheese. Continue heating until cheese is melted then pour into a shallow baking dish sprinkle with the ¼ cup grated cheese, and bake under broiler just long enough to brown slightly. Serve on golden brown toast, or in patty shells, and garnish with slices of Fresh Cucumber Pickle.

BAKED STUFFED WHITE FISH OR HADDOCK

1 medium-size fish
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 cups dry bread crumbs
¼ cup melted butter
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
Pepper
1 teaspoon onion juice
2 tablespoon fresh cucumber pickle

Wash fish carefully, then dry and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Combine dry bread crumbs, melted butter, salt, parsley, pepper, onion juice, and cucumber pickle and mix thoroughly. Stuff fish with the mixture and sew up with twine. Put fish into pan, dredge lightly with flour, and place several strips of bacon over the top. Add ½ cup water. Bake in a moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for about 1 hour and baste frequently, using ½ cup hot water combined with 1 tablespoon butter. Serve with tomato sauce.

SALMON AND PICKLE LOAF

1 can salmon
½ cup bread crumbs
½ cup milk
¼ cup coarsely chopped fresh cucumber pickle
1 egg
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon melted butter

Drain and flake salmon. Add bread crumbs, milk, pickle, egg, salt and melted butter. Mix well and pack into a greased pan or baking dish and set in a shallow pan of hot water. Bake in a moderate oven (375 deg. F.) for about 1 hour or until loaf becomes firm. Remove to a hot platter and pour white sauce over loaf. Arrange slices of hard cooked eggs over top, and on the slices of egg place slices of stuffed Spanish olives. Serve hot.

WHITE SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
½ teaspoon salt

TAILORED JUMPER

PATTERN 9512

A favorite of the young high school or college miss, this tailored jumper frock may change its blouse as often as its young wearer changes her mind.

That's one reason why she'll never tire of it, for a different blouse each day will give it the life of many dresses.

Wide, athletically inclined armholes and rounded neck make it comfortable for the most strenuous activities, while the released pleats of the skirt panel insure freedom of stride.

Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included

Pattern 9512 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 16 requires 1¾ yards 54-inch fabric and 1¾ yards 36-inch contrasting.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern.

ADVICE on LOVE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX and NELL BRINKLEY

When Love Needs a Bit Of Harmless Deceit

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

WE'VE HEARD a good deal these past few years about equal partnerships in love.

Does life abound in examples of these fifty-fifty love affairs?

Or is it true, as I am beginning to suspect, that it is just as natural now as it ever was for man to be the leader and protector, as well as the lover, accepting a good deal more than a half share in so-called love partnerships?

Just because so much has been said these latter years about women's independence; just because so many young wives have held jobs and done the housework, too, have young men come to prefer the girl who is not only deeply loving and devoted, but who unselfishly insists on standing squarely on her own two feet?

Or are they still likely to be beguiled, as I fear they always have been, by the self-indulgent coquette who makes herself irresistible by demanding that everything in the world be done for her while she does nothing in return?

I wonder! And what has set me wondering is the case of a girl whose loss of a lover seems to be due to her complete unselfishness and her innocence of the age-old trickery through which women "hold" their men.

This poor girl, Alma X., has been deserted by her boy friend. And why? She herself, tells the story.

"I had been engaged," she says, "for three divinely happy years. The time for our wedding was very near. Now I have lost him. He cares for another girl and has told me so. It is worse than losing my life. I love him with my whole being and always shall.

"But now I can do nothing but weep, both day and night. Sleep and food are out of the question. Do I deserve this misery, Miss Fairfax? Is it in any way my own fault? I beg you to tell me.

"My beloved has always had a small salary. So that we might save up and have a nice home, I have, against my parents' wishes, been working in a factory for three years. To help Jim save also, I haven't let him take me out at all. We just sat at home and planned our future.

"I loved him so terribly much that this was all I wanted, and I thought he felt the same way. I thought no two people ever loved each other so much before. And in my mind we were just as firmly bound together as though we were married.

"Two months ago, a girl, who had just met him, began to scheme to get him away from me. She would never lift a finger to help him, and she doesn't really love him. But she has him.

In this case, at least—and who knows in how many others?—it is heartbreaking to admit that abounding love on the girl's part has not been enough to save the day. Did Jim feel too sure of this devoted girl who so generously adored him, and who gave up years of her precious youth to slaving in the interest of his future comfort?

Or would it be fairer to say that he was uncomfortable because he really wasn't playing the man's part in this love situation? So that when a purely selfish siren came along, who gave him a chance to do all the loving, all the working, and likewise all the worrying, he fell for her and for the chance to play a completely masculine role.

Who Cares to Be Famous?

By Nell Brinkley

SOME TIME in her life every pretty girl dreams of being an actress or a picture star; of seeing her name in lights and receiving the eager applause of millions.

But few girls really try for fame—because love finds them first . . . and they never regret that fate. All the glory of the world is nothing beside the comfort of ling loved by ONE MAN who counts.

This lovely Nell Brinkley drawn shows Dan Cupid shooting another star out of the Hollywood firmament . . . And good for Dan! There will be no heartbreak nor fame for this girl, if she lives for love rather than fame. BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Luxuries From Spain

Exquisite Soaps And Perfumes

By JULIET SHELBY

WE DONT advocate that you run into debt to acquire luxurious toilet requisites—but we do hold that economy that will prevent your buying certain beauty aids is false economy indeed—poor for your spirit and morale.

One of the great excitements of the fall season—and quite the cream of the crop—is the arrival from Spain of a limited number of exquisitely lovely cosmetics.

Browsing through the toilet goods section of a downtown department store this week discloses all sorts of fascinating things—perfumes and soaps that have an air of Spanish splendor.

The fragrance of these perfumes is as heady as champagne. Subtle and disturbing, they have all the warmth and sensuousness of Spain itself.

We like to feel that their fragrance, however, is suited to American women as well, for there is no question but what they belong with regal furs and jewels—with sumptuous clothes and elegance.

These exotic, provocative perfumes all come from a century-old Spanish house. All are luxurious—desirable. Visiting Americans who have tried them on the wing of a visit to France and Spain constantly write back for more.

The soaps, which have been used by Spain's loveliest women for years, are exquisitely perfumed. They can be used on the finest, most delicate skins with perfect assurance.

You have an almost unlimited choice of scents to choose from—in both the perfumes and soaps. For those who like the rich, creamy fragrance of flowers of the Orient you will find that these breath-taking cosmetics take honors for irresistibility.

To learn the name of these Spanish toilleries—both perfumes and soap—tell Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Answers to Readers' Beauty Queries

By JULIET SHELBY

Question—I have a roll of fat directly under the breasts. I have tried dieting and exercises, but nothing seems to take it away. When I diet I lose weight from other parts of my body, but not from this spot. What can I do to get rid of this roll?

Mrs. Jean M., Dedham.

Answer—Yours is a common silhouette defect, and gives the effect of looking like a half section of a life preserver. Tackle it with determination and it will depart, however. Clasp hands tightly on the roll. Take a deep breath, pull the body tall and send the hands from side to side, pressing the flesh down onto the ribs and kneading it. Another good exercise is to stand erect, clasp the hands back of the head and throw the head as far back as it will go. When bringing the head to first position, pull up the shoulders. You'll feel a hard pull on muscles beneath the breasts. That will discourage fat cells and send them scooting.

Question: Will you please print your recipe for witch-hazel cold cream in your column. I am very anxious to make a pure cold cream as my budget is very limited at the present time and I cannot afford to buy an expensive one. H. F. E., Boston.

Answer: Sorry, but lack of space prevents the printing of lengthy recipes in this column. However, if you will write to this department again and enclose a stamped, self addressed envelope the recipe for this witch hazel cream will be sent to you. In order to make cold creams at home it is necessary to understand how they are compounded, for the best cold cream would be ruined if the oils were allowed to become hot. Detailed directions for compounding creams at home come with the recipe.

Test Is Curb of Scarlet Fever

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

SCARLET FEVER is one of the most dreaded of the infectious diseases, the "catching" diseases.

Although it may strike adults, it is most frequently observed in children between the ages of four and ten years.

Often it gives rise to serious complications, resulting in heart and kidney disease in later life. For this reason scarlet fever is considered to be very dangerous.

For many years little could be done for the victim. Today, it is possible to prevent serious complications, as well as the disease itself, by means of a special vaccine. Since the introduction of this preventive measure the mortality rate of scarlet fever has decreased considerably.

In 1923 Doctors George and Gladys Dick discovered a means of determining susceptibility to this disease. I refer to the "Dick test." Children and adults who are susceptible to scarlet fever and who if exposed to the germs will contract the disease, exhibit a positive reaction to the test.

This procedure is similar to the "Schick test," which determines the immunity of a child against diphtheria. By immunity is meant an ability on the part of the body to resist the disease if exposed to it.

The value of this procedure in diphtheria has been adequately proved within the past decade. It has brought about immunization of thousands and thousands of children. Immunization against the disease is made by means of injections of "toxin-antitoxin."

TEST IS ADVISED

In a similar manner, as a result of the Dick discoveries, it is now possible to receive immunization or protection against scarlet fever. Children who are susceptible to this disease can be immunized by injections of small doses of the scarlet fever preventive. It is a simple procedure and rarely if ever causes an alarming reaction.

Before receiving this treatment, it is advisable to have the Dick test made. Persons found to be immune will not require these injections. When the test is accurately performed there is no need for any doubt as to its reliability.

Bear in mind that immunity to scarlet fever and other diseases depends upon the number of contacts one has with the disease. In large and overcrowded communities a smaller percentage of the population is susceptible, as compared to the percentage in rural or suburban groups. That is one of the few advantages of city life.

Good Manners

Not Too Late For Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a rather unusual circumstance which arose. Our choir members gave a girl, who is to be married next month, a party and a shower after rehearsal one evening.

As I have been unable to attend rehearsals for some time before, I was unaware of the party ... ever, and it just happened ... I attended rehearsal that ev'ning. Well, I didn't have a g'... but they insisted that I attend the shower.

... it proper for me to give the girl a shower gift now, or wait until her wedding? I have been invited to her wedding and reception. If it is proper, I would prefer to give it to her before, perhaps as a "chest" gift or something ... H.

By all means carry out your generous plan of giving this girl a shower present. I suggest that with your gift you send a little note explaining why it is late for the shower but in time as an addition to her chest. She will be delighted at your thoughtfulness, I am sure.

FLOYD GIBBONS' PAGE OF THRILLS AND MYSTERY

The Dead Patient

The Terrifying "Night Call" of a Trained Nurse

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Nurses lead an adventurous life. Adventure is always just around the corner for them—as their next case, MRS. MARGARET SWEENEY, of 2 WALNUT COURT, ROXBURY, tells us today of the most thrilling case she ever had and it's a pip.

FLOYD GIBBONS

"When this happened," she writes, "I was looking for adventures and thrills. I was just a prosaic nurse, nearing 30, faced with the problem of earning a living."

Can you imagine a prosaic nurse? I can't. I think their very uniforms suggest adventure. But let's go along with Mrs. Sweeney on her strange "case."

It happened out in California in 1911. MRS. SWEENEY and a nurse friend of hers had just gone there for a change of climate. They registered at Nurses' Registry in Los Angeles and were placed "on call."

It rained that night—California papers please copy—but the rains do not stop the mails or nurses and Mrs. Sweeney got her call. A Mrs. Weldon, of Pasadena, the head nurse told her, was suffering from a infected hand. Her chauffeur would call for the nurse and bring her to the patient's home.

The car arrived—pretty quickly to come all the way from Pasadena—but Mrs. Sweeney saw nothing strange in that. A uniformed chauffeur sat in the driver's seat. She took her nurse's bag—always packed for an emergency—and started to climb into the rear of the big limousine.

The nurse did as she was told, and as the big car slid away into the night looked her driver over curiously. He was a big, bulky, rough-looking man with a broken nose and a cold air of authority that belied his uniform.

Once out of traffic, the car sped on into the night and soon reached the lights of Pasadena. During that half-hour run, Mrs. Sweeney says, the driver had not spoken a word. She began to have a strange feeling of uneasiness when he crossed the town without stopping and headed out toward the mountains

"Fear," Mrs. Sweeney says, "gripped me with a feeling of nausea. Furtive glances at the man's profile showed me a young, grim, hard-mouthed face that suggested the hardened criminal."

"I understood," she said, "that Mrs. Weldon lived in Pasadena and——"

"You understood all wrong," he cut in roughly. "It's a Mister Weldon and he's at my joint in the hills."

Afraid to speak again and now petrified with fear, the nurse sat quietly as the big car turned off the main road and jolted along a rough path through the foothills. The man turned off the lights and drove recklessly in and out of the trees through the pitch darkness of the rainy night. Before a rough-looking hut he stopped and almost dragged the nurse out of the car.

Inside the hut an oil lamp sputtered on the table. The furnishings were a dim blur. As Mrs. Sweeney's knees shook under her, the man grabbed the oil lamp and led the way to a smelly room off the kitchen. On a cot in a corner she could see a figure. The man held the lamp over the cot and then spat out a blasphemy.

"Looks like he's croaked," he growled.

Mrs. Sweeney's training overcame her fear and she looked at the figure on the cot. It was that of a young man. One arm was bandaged, but the eyes were wide open and staring—the mouth sagging in the unmistakable signs of death.

"Yes, he's dead," she said and then her terror of the strange person who had brought her returned. She felt now that she was dealing with a dangerous criminal—perhaps he had killed the man on the cot—and perhaps, she reasoned, she herself was now an unwanted witness.

"Shall we be going?" she asked nervously. "It's too late to do anything for your friend."

The man's small eyes looked at her coldly. She wondered what was going on in that obviously distorted mind. Without a word he pulled off his chauffeur's coat and placed a heavy revolver on the table.

"I need you," he said. "Better stick around a few days."

Mrs. Sweeney says her heart was in her mouth.

"Heat up a little coffee," she heard him say, and she was glad of the chance to go into the kitchen and do something. She asked no questions and the man volunteered no information. She made the coffee and they drank it and smoked countless cigarettes throughout the long night.

The end came suddenly. The man took his revolver and went out the door, after her bag in the car. As he stepped outside a fusillade of shots shattered the silence of the early dawn and Mrs. Sweeney had reached the end of her endurance. She slipped to the floor in a dead faint.

And it was on the floor that the police officers found her. It was lucky, they said, that she had fallen before the deadly fire raked through the walls of the hut. They did not know who she was and intended to kill everyone in that hut—just as the murderers who were now both dead—had done to their victims the week before!

But time's up, boys and girls, and I'm going to write a tandolar check for Nurse Sweeney and be on my way. But I'll be back again tomorrow.

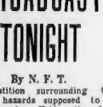
UNLUCKY FRIDAY BROADCAST TONIGHT

By N. F. T.

Superstition surrounding the month's hazards supposed to be rampant when Friday the 13th, rolls around, will provide the basis for some likely to be amusing dial diversion (WAAB) between 8:30 and 9 o'clock tonight.

It never was anything to be scared about with many people. But then as the Sultan says when his favorite wife goes back to mother, there are others.

Absurdities of the tradition are to be debunked in entertaining dramatic fashion, according to advance advices. Incidentally the numeral 13 first came into bad repute by way of Norse mythology. It seems that Angir's feast in Valhalla was to be attended by 12 gods. Loki, a sinister giant god, came uninvited as a 13th guest, causing the death of the god Balder. They must have handed Balder the check. Since then the meeting of 13 at dinner has been regarded in certain circles as an ill omen not to be regarded lightly.



VALLEE VARIETIES

Acting by the versatile Leo Carrillo of stage and screen comes to the forefront as a Rudy Vallee hour (WEEI) feature this evening from 8 to 9 o'clock 60 minutes this evening. Sir Malcolm Campbell, the auto driving "peed demon, is also a guest personality to be heard. He makes money driving fast, and it costs most folks a fancy fine fee.

Imogene B. Woolcott is back on the air (WNAC) again at 8:45 each morning, after an absence from the microphone of over three months. Mrs. Woolcott is a food and homemakers' service authority.

* * *

As for fearing bad luck with the advent on Friday, the 13th, tomorrow, it happens to be the day when James Wallington leaves his Radio City network job to start out on his own as a free lance producer of loudspeaker offerings.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

June Knight of filmland joins the Rudy Whiteman company (WEEI) tonight when it's 10 p. m. . . . Yankee Network men, Linus Travers in particular, make mention that when the "Cuckoon" went from coast to coast out of Boston last Monday night, the head Cuckoo, Ray Knight by name, considered many fair soloists to do the singing, finally choosing the reputation station vocalist, Alice O'Leary. Wonder if New York radio fiahns heard our Alice that night? . . .

Paul Regan, the mimic who won Major Bowes honors three weeks ago and who hails from Medford nearby, heads the Bowes amateur unit which moves in for personal appearance tomorrow behind Metropolitan Theater footlights . . . Italian listeners will find much of interest in the Hon. Phelps Phelps talk (WMEX) slated for tomorrow morning at 9:15 a. m.

One of the big cigar concerns has been after Ben Bernie to ballyhoo their brand, since Ben is said to light up no less than 10 cheroots per day. He doesn't consume much brew they say, but prefers to continue boosting the sale of suds . . .

Rumor also has it how Paul Whiteman isn't much of a cheese eater, either . . . Fred Waring and his "Pennsylvanians" are loyal sponsor patrons, however, and on every boy in the band drives one of the famous chug wagons built by their backer.

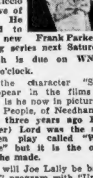
Radio Answers

Q—Are there any children in the family of Julia Sanderson and Frank Crummit? Do they live near Boston? H. K. of Melrose.

A—No, they are not parents. They live just outside of Springfield and call their residence "Dunrovin."

Q—What is the real name of the singer Frank Parker and what is his home town? If he doesn't continue with Jack Benny, will he have another place and when? —B. W. of Braintree.



Frank Parker

A—He is Frank Ciccio and a native of New York. He is slated to begin a new broadcasting series next Saturday night which is duo on WNAC waves at 7 o'clock.

Q—Did the character "Seth Parker" appear in the films at any time or is he now in pictures? —Plain People, of Needham.

A—About three years ago Phil (Seth Parker) Lord was the star of a screen play called "Way Back Home," but it is the only production he made.

Q—When will Joe Lally be back on the "X-9" program with "Tales of News" each Tuesday evening? Is he on any other program?? —S. G. of Belmont.

A—Joe is ill at present and hopes to be able to be on the air next Tuesday. No, he is not on any other airing at present, but expects added work at the "mike" very soon.

Q—Where can we hear the announcer Irwin Cowper, who was with WNAC a few years ago? —Remembering of Roslindale.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS —TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS!

During the last few weeks a number of queries from Junior Birdmen, regarding phases of Boston wing's activities and about aviation in general, have been received by letter or postal card and are answered below.

It is not limited to members of the organization. Adults, many of them write that they consistently read the Junior Birdmen news in the American and the Sunday Advertiser and many non-members may feel free to forward their questions to Boston wing headquarters, 100 Summer street, Boston.

The questions may deal with all angles of aeronautics, including pilots and their records, aero engines, theory of flying, air mechanics, navigation and aviation history.

All questioners are reminded, however, that if they desire a personal and written reply, they should enclose a three-cent stamp for postage or a self-addressed envelope. Junior Birdmen are especially reminded of this ruling.

Read the answers given to the Junior Birdmen in this column. You will find the information, in most instances, as interesting to you as to the member who writer the question.

AL BUSICCHIA—Nonexperts carefully studied the theories that Harcourt had perfected a "ray" that would put an igniting system of flying aircraft out of order. If this were true, it would be kept as a strict military secret and of course, no details of this invention would be made public.

WALTER A. KLINEFELTER—We regret there is no answer for numbers residing far from this wing city to obtain their ac rank other than by entering all events as an official model meet and placing first in fifth in any one event.

KURT WAGENENECHT—One dollar engine model do not restrict wing area, but the weight of the model is limited to not more than 2 pounds. At the recent Junior Birdmen Gas Model Classic the fuel was limited to ½ of an ounce per pound of weight of the model.

JOE KELLY, Middlebury, Vt.—Send complete reports of each aviation meeting, not just the first branch month.

ABRAHAM CATELMAN, Roxbury—An air marker beacon campaign would be an effort to get sections of the country so that pilots would be able easily to determine their whereabouts. A picture of the winners of the Novice Glider contest was printed on June 27. The column of July 31 gave a resume of the wing banner year. The U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce is now experimenting with a tailless plane. Address queries about the New York Model contest to Junior Birdmen, 1834 Broadway, N. Y. C.

MEYER GUSIN, Dorchester; LIONEL BLANC, Revere, and K. CARDIN, Attleboro—Federal Airways System, Aeronautics Bulletin No. 51, may be had by writing to Aeronautics Information Section, Bureau of Air Commerce, Washington, D. C.

PETER STARUCH, Dorval, P. Q., Canada—The only contests that count insofar as earning Ace hors is concerned is the annual indoor and outdoor wing tournaments.

MARTIN STERN, Brookline — The Junior Birdmen organization does not sell model plans materials of any kind.

10,000 Will March In A. E. F. Paarde

A parade with 10,000 marchers will be the highlight of the annual convention of the 101st Infantry, A. E. F., tomorrow and Saturday in Brookline.

A huge parade is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, at which Governor Curley, Lieutenant-Governor Hurley and General Edward L. Logan will be guests of honor.

"THE American Constitution is, so far as I can see, THE MOST WONDERFUL WORK ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man."—WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE, England's illustrious statesman, in an article, "Kin Beyond Sea," published in September, 1878.

Pilgrim Communists

In Colonial Marxachusetts

The learned Prof. A. A. Berle, Jr., retired Brain Truster and now New York's City Chamberlain, a native of Boston and former Harvard lecturer, throws new light on the early history of this country of keen interest to every student.

Addressing a group of New England Yankees the other day, the professor revealed that the early settlers of Massachusetts and nearby States were in fact Communists.

There was no "rugged individualism" in their creed, he announced, but, on the contrary, they were earnest practitioners of what were actually the best Marxian principles. If this was the case, it must follow that they were also atheists in disguise.

Let us hope that Professor Berle continues to woo the muse of history.

It may conceivably bring forth the information that the real author of the Declaration of Independence was Benedict Arnold, and of the Emancipation Proclamation Jefferson Davis.

Or even that a Raw Deal promise means something.

Amen to This!

Every Real American Will Say It

The sole object of the non-partisan Liberty League, formed one year ago by prominent Democratic and Republican leaders, is plainly explained by Jonett Shouse, its president.

On its first birthday he said:

"We oppose no one man. We support no one man. Our only purpose is to prevent destruction of the Constitution by executive decree or legislation obviously unconstitutional.

"There seems to be a general belief that we oppose ANY change in the Constitution. That is not true. All we ask is that if the Constitution is to be amended it be amended by the method provided by the Constitution itself."

The Constitution has been amended twenty-one times and, doubtless, will again be changed. But each of those amendments, with the possible exception of the prohibition amendment, was made OPENLY, after long debate and mature consideration, the people knowing and understanding what was being done.

Any change which is SNEAKED into the Constitution is that rotten apple which inevitably corrupts the barrel of good ones in which it is hidden.

Earning Welfare Money

How Will It Work Out?

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin of Quincy has started something new by ruling that able-bodied recipients of welfare money must give a day's work for every $4 received.

How this plan will work out is more than we can say.

It seems as if plenty of NEEDED employment could be found to keep such workers busy.

New England First

Protect Ourselves

Secretary Hull belatedly makes known the nature of the "trade interchange" proposals by Canada.

The six New England States can hardly be expected to be enthusiastic over the Canadian proposal for a 50 per cent reduction in American tariffs on potatoes, milk, cream, live cattle, meats, etc.

American protective tariffs were designed ORIGINALLY for the protection of American producers.

Why there should be a change in this basic plan is NOT evident.

Historic Concord

Grows More So

Concord has always been in the forefront of Boston's neighbors associated with the most stirring events of the American Revolution.

Let us hope it is conspicuously successful.

Canada's 'Stork Derby'

The Winner Is Sure of Her Million

The Supreme Court of Ontario, Canada, has upheld the validity of the will of Charles Vance Millar, founder of the "Stork Derby."

The will gives $1,000,000 to the mother of the most children born between October 31, 1926, and October 31, 1936, in the Canadian Province.

Whoever wins it—and one woman has had eleven children in nine years—will be the only person actually entitled to the expression so freely used by flagpole-sitters, Channel swimmers and winners of beer-drinking competitions.

And that is:

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Sept. 12—Out on Queens boulevard near Forest Hills there has sprung up something entirely new in depression entertainment. The effect is a Southern plantation, crude and country, bearing the name of "De South." It's lit by oil torches and lanterns hung from whiffletrees.

O. O. McIntyre

A dmission is free, a plate dinner 50 cents and tin cups of beer are dispensed from a corncrib bar. Off-side is a scrubby corral with an old nag roaming around. The entrance is over an old-fashioned four-step stile and benches and tables are scattered picnic style.

The orchestra pit is a dug-out in a haystack where black musicians in overalls and straw hats play kazoos. The only other instrument is a guitar. The waitresses are garbed in pickaninny dress. A couple may dance all evening for a dollar and the floor is well filled.

The whole enterprise is quartered on a long abandoned lot and probably represents an investment of not more than $1000. Yet from the opening it has proved a winner. The immense tree parking space is filled with limousines of Long Islanders stopping for a bit of slumming.

No poet in the world lives so luxuriously as D'Annunzio. His villa on the picturesque mountainside at Lake Garda, Italy, is one of the most magnificent estates in Europe. There is a pretentious entrance, like a refined gateway to Luna Park. On the highest peak is a war ship, a relic of his gallant days in Fiume. He has two planes, five cars, fifteen dogs and an army of servants that fairly tumble over each other. All at the expense of the Italian government.

Robert Sherwood, the playwright, is reputedly among the most welcome American visitors to Vienna. His sympathetic play, "Reunion in Vienna," contributed largely to his popularity. A correspondent, writing there, writes:

"My first visit since 1928 and what a change. No one smiles. They just keep hoping. On the anniversary of the Dollfuss assassination the whole town paused in mournful silence. Everything was dark save for the two candles that flickered in every available window. It's the most lasting personal sorrow I ever beheld."

Last of the Viennese boulevardiers is the writer, Ferenc Molnar. Every afternoon at 5 he sits at his favorite cafe table sipping his favorite tipple—a light pernod faintly hued with grenadine. His fashion carved ivory cigarette holder juts upward at the Joe Cannon angle. And the only bright relief in his rather dour expression is his shining monocle.

Incidentally, I have a feeling I had the nearest closeup I shall ever attain of an 18-karat cosmopolite in a Waldorf foyer the other day. He stepped from an elevator, a be-spatted, gardenized symphony in two-toned gray with a Ben Ali Haggin twirl to his slight mustache.

A charmingly fluffy Billie Burke's type on a divan rose expectantly exclaiming, "My dear Baron, you are late!"

He murmured some polite nothing, touched her fingers slightly to his lips and, as casually as one might snoot a cuff, dropped a monocle from his eye smack into his vest pocket without touching it. Then he gave her his arm and together they marched toward a dining room.

Thingumabobs: Lowell Thomas was a school teacher in Colorado before he wrote a book about Lawrence of Arabia and became famous . . . Oscar of the Waldorf never smoked until past 50 . . .But now he gives a pipe thata . . . Lamar, Mo., is agitating a Ted Cook avenue to honor the humorist who lives there . . . The famous . . . A valet on the Prince of Wales royal staff is named Nipcuck . . . Ben Ames Williams is another author who avoids New York save on most pressing business . . . Chic Sale in only two years of authoring on the side netted $125,000.

Leon Gordon stopped in a cafeteria near his studio for a buckwitty-buckwitty bite the other noon. His coffee had too much cream and he asked for a stronger cup. When it was set down, the waitress archly inquired: "Is that too less?"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

YOU DON'T LIKE ME?

You say
You don't like me,
You're off me, you say,
Ever since I wrote
What I did
About mother,
Or prohibition,
Or alimony,
Or convicts,
Or working wives,
Or somethin' else.
That doesn't just jibe
With your ideas.
Ever since then
You've been off me,
Yeah?
Well, what of it?
Suppose you don't Agree with me;
Suppose I don't
Agree with you.
What difference
Does that make?
Why should that make
Enemies of us?
Why should you
Go around feeling
Sore's a pup,
Acting as if you'd
Been two-timed, insulted?

Elsie Robinson

You know and I know
New ideas
Are good for us
Minds need stirring.
Minds need shaking;
Minds that stay still
Soon go stagnant—
You and I both
Know thats' true—
Then why should you
He sore because
I hand you
Something new,
Something hard to take?

You pretend its' because
You love the Truth;
You pretend I've shocked you
But my flippancy,
My irreverance,
My unconventionality;
You pretend
You're defending
The sacred Status Quo
Against mutts like me.
G'wan!
Who do you think
You're fooling!

You're not defending Anything except Yourself!
You don't really
Give a hoot
What I say
About mothers or alimony
Or anything else—
But you care PLENTY
About protecting
Your own conceit,
Your own comfort,
Your own laziness,
Your own ignorance,
All of which
Are frightfully menaced
By NEW IDEAS.

New Ideas
Will raise Cain,
Worse than dynamite,
With anyone's complacency.
New Ideas
Show up weakness,
Tip off cowardice,
Unmask dumbness
Quicker than
A G-Man's gun!
New Ideas
Are the worst thing
A mean, stupid,
Stubborn, cowardly
Human has to fear.
He can fight almost Anything else—
Duck almost Anything else—
But a new Idea
Has him on a spot—
A New Idea can make
The Biggest Noise
Sounds like a baby's cry
In no time at all.

Why are you
Mad at me?
Why are you
Off me and my ideas?
That's why!
You don't care
Whether my ideas
Are right or wrong—
You don't care
Whether they are
"A menace to society"
Or not—
But you care like thunder
Because they're a menace
To YOU—
And so you decided
To put me
ON THE SPOT!

Maybe YOU'RE
Laughing at this—
Maybe YOU'RE thinking
This doesn't apply
To YOU—
But don't be Too sure!

And the next time you feel
Your neck hair rising.
Or your jaws purpling
Over some new theory,
Ask yourself—
"Do I feel like this
"Because I'm shocked—
"Really?
"Or do I
"Feel like this
"Because I'm worried
"And pserved
"AND AFRAID?"

Oysters "R" Good

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Here is the first of the "R" months, and here's old Captain Cobus Kwaak scooping up oysters in Great South Bay. Fifty-nine years he's been at it, and he finds in the patient and fecund oyster an epitome of a larger cosmos and larger events.

Edwin C. Hill

"It's going to be a hard winter," says Captain Cobus — that's his only designation in Long Island. "The oysters are bedding deep and getting ready to hibernate early. They're unusually fat. That means they spawned early, loaded up on plenty of food and got ready for a long spell of bad weather."

The weather wisdom and worldly wisdom of Captain Cobus is highly regarded around Great South Bay. Of his lightly-carried 73 years all but three were spent around Long Island.

He sometimes eats a bushel of oysters after dinner. They are not filling, he says, and never make one fat. He weighs 225 pounds, but he says that's because he eats too much corn and potatoes.

He's out with his dredge. A huge bag made of iron rings, lipped with a saw-toothed blade, is lowered by a windlass. He knows the contour of the bottom of the sea as a musician knows an instrument's keyboard.

This bed is "high but reoling," this one is "hilly on the east"; this one is "low, flat and muddy." The iron bag brings up a bit of red sponge. That means good oysters.

SKILLFUL DREDGING

Not too deep and not too shallow he plays his dredge. He must not merely scoop the surface and damage the bed. He must not go too deep and bring up mud and sand. With a touch as measured and as gently varying as Toscanini's baton, he deploys his windlass.

A few years ago, in Chicago, a famous sociologist gave a dinner at a fashionable hotel. As each course was served, a fisherman, a farmer or some other producer of basic food stepped from behind a curtain and told how and where it was obtained— the hazards, the drama, the skills, the rewards of serving the complex food requirements of an urban population.

It not only dramatized but humanized and particularized the vast complexities of our modern food economy, with its widening range of diet, of processing and cooking; of refrigeration, transportation and all the multiple refinements of cuisine.

Here, in this mood of the Chicago sociological dinner, we might appropriately introduce Willie van Hoophen-Hyphen, night club playboy, ordering blue points, to old Captain Cobus, who perhaps fell through the ice to get this plate of oysters.

It would bridge a vast hiatus in a de-personalized exchange economy in which we take too much for granted. How heedlessly we slide into the "R" months, and how little we know or care about who gets the oysters for us and how?

Captain Cobus could tell the young boulevardier about the time he cut a canal three miles through the ice, at 12 below zero, to keep the oyster market supplied; he could tell him of cold and mud, and wind and sleet; of the curious cycles of pests which assail oysters and, incidentally, as one who has a robust belief in life—above sea or under—of his seven daughters and three sons, his 28 grandchildren and his eight great-grandchildren.

The Romans cherished the Lucrine oysters. Their epicurean significance was evident then as now, with wide elaborations and refinements in their preparation. But when the Romans conquered Britain and took back to Rome the first English Whitstable oysters, from the shores of Kent, Agrippa swept the Lucrine oysters from his table and thereafter served only the British bivalves.

Long before Columbus landed, the Indians ate oysters. At Damariscotta, Me., there is a mound containing 3,000,000 bushels of oyster shells, left by the Indians. In China and Italy, long before the Christian era, oysters were cultivated for food, and artificial beds maintained.

Pork Barrel Politicians

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

Twin "Foes of our own Household" today are the radical propagandist and the pork barrel politician.

These intriguers would have the plain people believe that the Constitution of the United States must be rewritten if the tax burden of the people is to be alleviated and the quality of government improved.

Under this "specious pretext" the radical is attempting, as George Washington predicted in the Farewell Address, "to undermine that which cannot be directly overthrown."

This the pork barrel politician is willing should be done provided he and his kind can continue to extort taxes from the American people in order to maintain hundreds of thousands of political appointees on the payrolls of Federal, State and local governments.

TOO MANY DEBTS

It is not necessary to overthrow the government of the Constitution in order to reduce the cost of government or to raise its standard of administration.

It is not necessary to set up in Congress a political despotism or send to the White House a political dictator in order to enable the American people to meet the economic challenges of modern times.

It is not necessary to pay through the nose in taxes the bills of 182,000 governments under the Flag in order to protect the people in their right "to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" which the government of the Constitution was established to safeguard.

Why should the American people be taxed to support four hundred and thirty-five members of the national House of Representatives when a handful of two hundred members can give them better national representation at far less cost?

Why should the American people be taxed to support forty-seven legislatures, each with its Senate and House of Representatives, when a legislature of one house will better and more economically serve each State?

Why should the American people be taxed and taxed and taxed to maintain the spoils system under which our political bosses pack the public payrolls with their political workers when the public service can be more efficiently and economically manned by a merit system of appointment?

'Dear Govt.'

By Winston Norman

Democrat Party
Wash., D. C.
Dear Party:

AS A Prominent Democrat, that has been living off of the Govt longer than anybody else on my street, I want to protest on a trick that my Next Door Neighbor has played on the New Deal.

We was talking about the 1936 Elections, and I says:

"You Republicans can't scare us Democrats none. We have a Candidate right in the White House, and he is the most Promising Candidate we ever had," I says.

"He sure is," says my Neighbor, "he will promise anybody anything. But I have seen a March on him," says my Neighbor, "because I have wrote out a Platform where the U. S. People can see the kind of a nightmare they will have when their New Deal Dream comes true."

So then he showed me the Platform he had written, and this is the way it went:

THE NEW DEAL PLATFORM FOR 1936

1—We promise another 4 years of Prosperity to every Democrat on the Govt payroll.

2—We promise you Musey Legislation, which the President will dash off on the back of an old envelope, for Congress to pass in a Musey Condition.

3—We want to help the Working Man. To do this we will flood the U. S. A. with cheap foreign goods, the factories will close down, and the Working Man will have a nice, restful life on the Dole.

5—While the money lasts we will pay the Farmer for not planting, not harvesting and not voting any other ticket.

6—The New Deal guarantees Economic Security to every citizen over 120 years of age.

7—Our Inheritance Tax Plan will be painless. We will take the Life Insurance you left for your widow and children, but you won't feel the expense, because you will be dead.

8—Your children won't suffer in their old age. We will tax them to death while they are still young.

10—Your bank deposits will be safe under the New Deal, because we will force the Banks to invest your deposits in Govt Bonds, which we don't expect to pay off.

11—We promise to keep your wife stylishly slim, by raising food prices so high that she won't have enough to eat.

12—We promise to make all kinds of Forgotten Promises to the Forgotten Man, but never to forget his vote.

Yours truly,
W. NORMAN.
